Private millionaire leaves thousands to Texas civic institutions, surprises friends

DALLAS (AP) — Mildred Alford once sent her maid back to the store because she forgot to use a 5 cent coupon when she bought a can of her favorite chicken noodle soup. "She didn't care that she would spend more money paying for her housemaid's gas to drive back to the store," said longtime neighbor Marian Norvell. "It was the spirit of being frugal that she mostly cared about."

Norvell said her jaw never dropped farther than when she learned Mrs. Alford was a millionaire. The retired school principal, who died last year at age 91, quietly left $250,000 gifts distributed this month to the Dallas Zoo, the Dallas public library, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, a homeless shelter and Children's Medical Center of Dallas.

What perplexes many of her friends is how a lifetime educator, who retired in 1970, managed to accumulate a net worth of nearly $2 million.

Residents in the modest neighborhood of brick homes said she didn't come from a wealthy family, didn't marry rich men — she was twice widowed — and never spoke about her money.

"It's not that she never spent any money, she just never flaunted it," said Mary Hall, executor of Alford's estate. "She lived off of about $500 a month even though she was bringing in about nine times that."

Hall said that in addition to pinching pennies, her friend profited from the late boom and wise computer companies. She spent pocket change on cents in her account."

Alford lived in a home for eight times that she died. Another owned, which cost $1 million. Alford's mother moved to Texas for more than $200,000 for the death, Hall said.

Judge leaves Cisneros trial date up in the air

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — A judge hearing pre-trial arguments in the case of a woman accused in a murder-for-hire plot ruled Monday on defense motions but left the date and location of the trial up in the air.

Attorneys for Dora Cisneros, who is facing federal charges for allegedly arranging the murder of her daughter's ex-boyfriend, had previously requested a change of venue, but no decision was made on that Monday.

Cisneros attended the hearing with her husband and daughter, but didn't comment during or after the proceedings. She is free on bond pending the trial. Her attorneys and Assistant U.S. Attorney Mervyn Mosbacher also refused comment.

Judge Filemon Vela unsealed the indictment against Cisneros Monday and rejected defense arguments that federal prosecutors unlawfully had both a Brownsville and Houston grand jury investigate the case.

Mosbacher said only a Houston grand jury, which returned the indictment, investigated the case.

Vela also rejected motions to dismiss the case on the grounds that the federal trial constituted double jeopardy.

Cisneros was convicted in 1994 on state charges of arranging the murder-for-hire of Joey Fischer, an 18-year-old high school senior who had dated Cisneros' daughter.

But the conviction was overturned by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, which found the prosecutor had left out a few crucial words in the jury charge.

Cisneros was accused of arranging the murder through Maria Mercedes Martinez, a healer dealing in love potions and tarot readings. Martinez was the key witness in the case against Cisneros and is expected to testify again in the federal case.

Martinez pleaded guilty to committing the murder and is serving 20 years in prison. She testified that she hired two Mexican men to kill Fischer.

Testimony in the federal case is expected to take about a week. The judge said Monday will inform attorneys later about the date and location, according to Kansas City spokeswoman for the U.S. Attorney's District office.

Texas lawmakers powerless to resolve rail problems

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas lawmakers are powerless to address congestion problems stemming from the Union Pacific-Southern Pacific rail merger that some estimate are costing the state's economy $100 million per month.

Sen. David Sibley, R-Waco, chairman of the Senate Interim Committee on Economic Development, said after several hours of testimony Monday related to the railroad problems that there was little the state could do.

"At this point in time, we are at the mercy of the Congress," Sibley said.

Sibley suggested during the hearing that the state should open up tracks owned by a specific railroad to competition by allowing competitors to pay the track owner for use of the track.

The Texas Railroad Commission also has offered a plan that would encourage competition by other railroads on tracks owned by Union Pacific, the nation's largest railroad.

But Sibley was later told such a move would require approval by the federal government, which regulates railroads.

Sibley said he would try to meet with Texas congressional members during a trip to Washington this week, but sounded a bit pessimistic about getting any help from Congress.

"If all we can do is just stand back and ask them to do us a favor, then I guess we've got a problem," Sibley said.

Sibley pressed Union Pacific's Bob Starzel, vice president of the railroad's western region, to pinpoint when congestion problems with the railroad would be ironed out.

"Are we talking weeks or months, months or years or years to decades?" Sibley asked.

"Months," Starzel replied.

Starzel said he couldn't be more specific because predictions that things would be running smoothly by last fall were grossly off-base.

"We are not going to predict any more about when things are going to improve because we seem to miss on our predictions," Starzel said.

Beginning in the summer of 1997, fallout from the Union Pacific-Southern Pacific merger has affected all industries that rely on the shipping of goods such as agriculture, energy, timber and petrochemicals.

Delays in integrating the Pacific's personnel and services into the Union Pacific system as implementing a new computer system to help in routing caused massive glitches in the system, Starzel said.

The company has laid off 1,000 workers and locomotives to ease the backlog on its lines.
