The Grammy-winning rapper, who was born Dana Owens, said she picked Latifah from a book of Muslim names when she was 8. She was visiting relatives in Newark, N.J., and the book belonged to a cousin. "It meant delicate and sensitive. So I decided that would be my nickname."

When music caught her interest, she started making demos with the help of friends she met in the rap industry and finally scored with 'Princess of the Posse," which was shown on "Yo! MTV Raps" and led to a contract with Tommy Boy Records. She won a Grammy for best rap solo performance in the song "U.N.I.T.Y." in 1995.

Rapping hasn't been her only gig. She starred in "Living Single," a sitcom that ran for five seasons on the Fox network, and has starred in several films including Set It Off and Sphere, with Sharon Stone and Dustin Hoffman.

Set It Off came after a difficult peri od for Latifah. She was coping with the death of her brother, a car-jacking in which a friend was wounded, and her arrest during a traffic stop for gun and marijuana possession.

Her newest project, Order in the Court, is an album on her own label, Flavor Unit, distributed by Motown.
