WHERE ARE YOU GOING?

The Peace Corps welcomes back the Class of 1999. And while we have your attention, we'd like to ask you a question.
Where will you be in a year from now?

We're looking for someone confident, dedicated and adventurous. Someone who likes working with people and isn't afraid to take on a challenge. Someone to join the 6,700 people already working in 80 developing countries around the world. Someone who would like to spend two years in another country. To live and work in another culture. To learn a new language, acquire new skills and sharpen existing ones. To have the experience of a lifetime.

We don't want just anyone - we need someone special. And we ask a lot. But only because so much is needed.

If this sounds interesting to you, then maybe you're the person we're looking for. A Peace Corps volunteer. Find out.

Recruiters will be on campus October 6 to 8. Watch the Battalion for details.

FRESHMEN

Although the week may be difficult for the freshmen, it is equally tough for the upperclassmen who are responsible for the training of the new cadets.

Will Reed, a junior kinesiology major, said he finds motivating the freshmen at times perplexing.

"One of the hardest parts of FOW is the fact that different people are motivated in different ways. Finding the right motivation for each individual and working with them while trying to maintain them as a unified class is a big challenge," Reed said.

Retaining incoming freshmen is a top priority, but not all who enroll find the Corps to be what they wanted. Matt Sellman, a senior business analysis major, said he believes the Corps is welcoming to those who are interested, but not all who join know exactly what they are getting.

"The Corps is open to everyone, but it's not exactly for everyone," Sellman said. "Some people come and know just what to expect, others come with major misconceptions and we have to accept that. Some freshmen just aren't going to want to see it through."

Bubba Moser, a sophomore agricultural sciences major, said it was a successful FOW for him.

"My fish came out under the special and that they are part of something that not everyone is doing," Moser said.

The focus of FOW is training freshmen, but this year the Corps is another dilemma to deal with. One of the Corps dorms, Quadrangle has resulted in seating arrangements and over-crowding.

"Believe it or not," Sellman said, "the toughest part of this whole hasn't had anything to do with that has been planned out. It has actually been trying to and situate the rest of the quad of all the overcrowding on the
