Report points to narrow miss of recession; manufacturing still

NEW YORK (AP) gauge of future economic activity rebounded in July after hinting at a recession in the months ahead.But manufacturing remained in the doldrums last month

Altogether, three reports, including one showing construction spending reaching a record high in July, painted a picture Tuesday of an economy continuing to grow slowly after its sizzling pace early this year. We are barely going to avoid a recession, but perhaps not much more than that," said Sung Won Sohn, chief economist at Norwest Corp. in Minneapolis The reports were prepared before the latest upheaval on Wall Street. The Dow fell more than 500 points on Monday, wiping out this year's gains. Some fear the downturn could lead people to curb their spending, tipping the economy into recession. President Clinton, speaking during a visit to Moscow, sought to calm American investors unnerved by the turmoil roiling global markets. We believe our fundamental economic policy is sound," he said. The Conference Board, a private research group, reported its Index of Leading Economic Indicators gained 0.4 percent in July, reversing two months of declines that had raised the specter of a downturn coming.

The index advanced to 105.4 in July, well ahead of expectations. There is little risk of recession in the near term," the board said in a statement. Separately, the National Association of Purchasing Management reported its index of business activity rose slightly in August, but not enough to indicate the manufacturing sector is expanding. The reading stood at 49.4 percent, marking the third straight month the measure was under 50 percent, a sign of contraction in the industrial sector. The overall economy, meanwhile, grew for the 88th month in a row, according to the survey of corporate purchasing executives. The indicator is usually the first showing of how the economy performed in the previous month.

MIAMI (AP) — Tropical Storm about 350 miles south-southwest of Earl strengthened rapidly Tuesday and was expected to become the season's third hurricane as it moved on a track toward the U.S. Gulf Coast. The storm's clouds filled the gulf and one computer model projected "explosive intensification," the National Hurricane Center said. 'It's getting better organized per minute," said forecaster Lixion Avia at the hurricane center in Miami. 'How intense it's going to be, I don't know. ... This is in the developing stage at the present time.' By late morning Tuesday, the storm's highest sustained wind was blowing at 60 mph, up from 40 mph late Monday. Its center was New Orleans and it was moving north at 6 mph. Earl was expected to build into a hurricane by late Tuesday or today and could come ashore Friday with 90 mph wind. It was expected to hit land somewhere from Texas to the Florida Panhandle, with the likeliest striking point near New Iberia, La., meteorologists said. But no watches or warnings were immediately posted.

Just last week, Tropical Storm Charley ran ashore in Texas, causing flooding that was blamed for at least 19 deaths there and in Mexico.

Elsewhere, a tropical storm watch was posted for Bermuda as Hurricane Danielle rolled across
