A2322

alion

n front of G. Roll All skill levels are 1ike at 847-533

MEDALS: MEDI 4-18. Look for 361 or email us

ACF): We will a 30 p.m. in 407

anda at 696431

om 6 p.m to 2

ofessional Asso stribution (PAU) rbecue will be oha Phi Alpha ssic 5-K Runw be given to the C Cepheid Varia Anime showing Evangelion 8.

le (WISC):

men in the Arti

regional artist 0-9:30 p.m.in2

sion and refres

at 822-52501

noon to 28

P-TEST to res

LAN

AP-TEST

plan.com

lio

eier, Managing nston, Opinion y, Aggielife Edi , Sports Edito ailey, Radio A er, Night News

own, Web edil

art Patton, Brad So

ANT: Jake Schrick phanie Corley, Mil., Cory Willis & Ed

d Graeber, Steph

& Chad Mallam. abriel Ruenes & A

, Manisha Pareit

Ta Smith, Monica® Francis & Terry®

e, Eli Chavez & Chri

msberger. Ali Belin, Lisa 🕬

Aggielife

omen at

Graphic by Brad Graeber and Brandon Bollom

At Right: Today's female leaders, ready to take A&M into the next century (from left to right) are Amy McGee, Speaker of the Student Senate, Kelly Garrity, Deputy Corps Commander, and Laurie Nickel, Student Body President.

Below: Sonja Faye Oliphant was the first female veterinary student at Texas A&M in 1963.

A tradition for

know to appreci-

e NOVA: Ope love and honor our Chris at 690 len, but we also know

t a fix Eve got us in in garden of Eden. Let's not nside hat happen at A&M."

al Sch ns fro Gordon Wisenbaker, Class of , in a letter dated May 8, 1963 Texas Governor John Connally, seminar with Sing the admission of women fadmission of women california. Thou of Medic to his alma mater Texas AMC.

Wisenbaker was not shy about voicing his unmen happiness with the decision of the Board of Directors in April 1963 to admit women to the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Texas. In 1963, TAMC was changed to TAMU and the A&M did not stand for Agriculuture and Mechanical anymore.

This year marks the 35th anniversary of the decision, which allowed "qualified A&M students on a day-student basis to all graduate programs and to the school of Veterinary Medicine

A&M would also admit to undergraduate programs "qualified women who were either A&M staff members or the wives or daughters of students and college employees.

After 92 years as an all-male military institution, the leaders of A&M had decided to open its doors to women.

The decision ran under such headlines as "Tradition Shattered" in the  $\overline{\it Dallas\ Times\ Herald}$ , and was greeted with dissension by many former students, one of whom turned in his Aggie ring in protest.

In a Houston Post article from Apr. 28, 1963, several students shared their reactions. Howard Conner, Class of '65, said he thought of A&M on the same level as West Point, and could not imagine West Point going co-ed. West Point was the first military academy to accept women.

The student body president, Sheldon Best, said in the article he "was really disappointed, and hoped against hope that they wouldn't do it.'

However not all reaction was negative. Colonel Eugine C. Oates, Class of '41, did not find fault with the ruling.

"Maybe I've been away too long, but I frankly don't see anything wrong with it," he said. Dr. Sara Alpern, associate professor of history, said the decision came down as part of a national civil rights and women's movement and also as a reaction to legal and economic pressure.

We had legal pressure to admit women. We were experiencing economic loss by not accepting women," she said. "For example, our growth was 29 percent compared to 70 percent at the University of Texas. That affected our Permanent University Fund."

The Corps of Cadets did not organize a protest or demonstration in reaction to the decision from the board. That could be because Gen. Earl Rudder, president of the University at the time, orchestrated the students' activities to minimizie

A letter from Bill Bammel Jr. and Gene Edelman, both Class of '65 and representatives of Company F-1, describes a series of events that prevented students from having a say in the matter.

The two men wrote the letter in response to Texas newspapers that described the atmosphere at A&M as "calm." In the letter, they said they felt the papers insinuated the students were happy with the decision.

Bammel and Edelman argued that the Board of Directors made its decision on a Saturday. On Friday, the Corps of Cadets had been given a dismissal from Saturday Drill for the first time that year. Most students went home, unaware that the directors meeting was taking place.

SEE WOMEN ON PAGE 7.

Join us at First Baptist Bryan this Sunday!

> On Campus Bus Pick Up 9:15 a.m.

Quad • Commons Fish Pond

Welcome Back Brunch Free Food!

Texas Avenue at 28th Street Just 4 Miles North of University Drive

www.fbcb.com

Limited Amount of Tickets Available at: MSC, Rothers, Dudley's, Disco Round or 1-800-333-7188

ICE