Career Center offers seminar on professional

BY SARAH GOLDSTON

The Career Center is holding a "Dress for Success" seminar Sept. 24 at 7:30 p.m. in 159 Wehner.

The event is sponsored by David Shellenberger, owner of The Suit Club, and Foley's.

Tassie Boultinghouse, an employee for Foley's and Class of '90, will speak about the corporate culture and what is appropriate attire for women to wear to a job interview.

Shellenberger has worked in the men's clothing business for 29 years and said he believes students can put themselves at a competitive advantage if they prepare for their job interviews.

"Students have spent time preparing themselves academically for a job; they should prepare themselves for their interviews as well," he said.

He said if a student invests money in an education, job interviewing is an area of preparation they should make time for before an interview.

"It's like betting $80,000 on getting a job; if you prepare, you can expect a return investment," Shellenberger said.

Terri Morrison, assistant director of the Career Center, said this seminar is the kick off for this interviewing year.

"This seminar will help students prepare for interviewing — they will learn what would be suitable to wear to interviews," she said.

Morrison said students can learn how to begin building a professional wardrobe.

"At the seminar, speakers will show students how to shop for suits, what are the best fabrics and fabric texture, how to accessorize and how to choose the right shoes," Morrison said.

Shellenberger said when it comes to interview dressing most students have a lack of knowledge.

"Students may have gathered misinformation about what to wear," he said. "At the workshop we use research from John Malloy's book, Dress for Success. Certain things students wear to an interview are correct; others are totally incorrect."

Morrison said if students attend the workshop they will learn the difference between business formal and business casual.

"To skeptical students I would like to talk to them about how critical first impressions are — they make a tremendous impact. One of the first things an interviewer sees is a person's clothes," she said. "We want our students to look as professional as possible."

NEWS IN BRIEF

Bush: Presidency will remain intact

NEW YORK (AP) — George Bush believes the institution of the presidency remains strong despite the White House sex scandal.

In an interview with Newsweek, the former president refused to discuss the scandal that threatens to bring down President Clinton. He referred to it only as "current events."

Bush told Newsweek he believes the institution of the presidency will emerge intact.

"When Carter left office, Lloyd Cutler wrote an article saying maybe the (presidency) had become too big for any individual to cope," he said. "Reagan came in ... and made very clear that he could cope."

Bush is calling attention to his own legacy, having written a new book, A World Transformed, with his former national security adviser, Brent Scowcroft. The book chronicles how Bush handled the end of the Cold War.

CLINTON

Melissa Oestreich, Vice President of Membership for College Republicans, hasn't always agreed with President Clinton, but thinks his presidency has been somewhat of a success.

"He hasn't done a bad job as president," Oestreich said. "I don't always agree with him on specific policy issues but he has done a decent overall job."

When asked about the alleged offenses, Aggie Democrat President Michael Schaub doesn't see any of the president's actions as grounds for impeachment.

"I think that it is pretty clear that he hasn't committed any impeachable offenses," Schaub said. "He has done a great job as president so far, and I think that we need to ignore the personal and concentrate on his policies."

Eva Darski, President of College Republicans has yet to read any of Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr's reports.
