Taiwan delegates to visit A&M campus

A 10-member delegation of scientists from Taiwan is visiting Texas A&M this week to learn and establish collaborative research on agricultural biotechnology.

The delegation's visit is part of a Taiwan Endowment of $500,000 given last November to the International Center in the Bush Presidential Conference Center from the government of Taiwan.

A second delegation will visit the campus the week of Feb. 7.

The scientists will focus on programs in the Colleges of Veterinary Medicine, Agriculture and Life Sciences.

In addition, they will tour the Institute of Biosciences and Technology, Texas A&M's Weslaco Research and Extension Center, and Texas A&M's Shrimp Mariculture Project.

NEWS IN BRIEF

The delegation's visit is co-sponsored by the National Science Council of the Republic of China, The Taipei Economic and Cultural Office in Houston and the International Center.

Citizens meet to discuss future plans of city council

College Station citizens representing various neighborhoods gathered last night to voice concerns about future plans the College Station City Council has in mind for the city.

Members of We, The People: Concerned Neighborhoods Organization expressed their desires to remove certain city council members they think do not serve in the best interests of the city and reverse the plans for the Northgate Parking Garage.

Leaders at the meeting stressed the importance of student and community involvement in city issues. Environmental and door-to-door campaigns are group emphasized for getting community involved.
