BY R. DELUNA ALOT

 Miller said the program presented a skill set man experiences including laundry on campus and Sbis food intermixed with Silver Taps as Jeff Bailey and John nior yell leaders and Agmonti, Moses Hall created the first yell practice for school seniors.
 Matt Matoushek, director of operations for SLOT and a computer engineering major, is proud of the leaders in the freshmen in ALOT. "The freshmen in ALOT members really yearned for a standing job, and I and them all."
 Matoushek said members have been their acceptance into the opportunity to be a learned leadership skills. "The goal of the freshmen to give the [A&M] freshmen the opportunity to show their leadership designs."
 A second conference for Feb. 26 and 27 is expected to attract 160 high school students.

REUNION

 Williams said she and 2020 and other A&M graduates are interested in a high school reunion. "I started on people other than just me on from M. done lo things. V they know what it really is not just football," she said. "The Barbara don't see why it can't be the realization of the South."
 Leslie Montgomery, a former student and a 1994 graduate, said she would make a resource for the University's recruitment and retention of minority students. "A&M is such a fortunate university," she said. "I think I could make a lot of support of internat doing our part to help Students and g city help students."
 She said the group would promote recruitment by visiting schools and high schools in identical areas to introduce to benefits of attending A&M.
