Robert Arnett, author of India Unveiled, presented a slide show of historical Indian landmarks, religious temples, mosques and nature scenes Friday.

Arnett spoke of his adventures and experiences, and he addressed the topics of art, culture and religion. Arnett discussed the concept of Dharma, meaning duty and virtue. "India is the most metaphysically blessed country in the world," he said.

Arnett said people become bored because they are seeking happiness externally, and Dharma requires no external recognition.

Arnett said yoga has helped him throughout his life.

"Yoga defines neutralization of the brain waves and requires a lot of concentration," he said.

Arnett said his book was rejected by publishers, so he had to take the financial responsibility upon himself.

He encouraged the audience to live their dreams and get in touch with their higher selves.

"You're not going to live your life fully if you try to live through someone else," he said. "Each of us has a talent that we can do better than anyone else."

Akhilesh Ravi, president of the India Association (IA) and a management information systems graduate student, said Arnett to promote Awareness Month he said he hoped members of the book to be campus libraries.

"The quality of the depth of the book real educational material, even many Indians about," Ravi said. "I share this with the IA."

Arnett said Eastern civilizations should be

"Until we are at pre-cultural roots and are 100 percent, you can't be at peace with your cause in a way you yourself," he said.
