Pat Green
Here We Go
 CD Courtesy of Universal Entertainment

Pat Green has struck gold with his third album. He pulled together everything that made his first two great, dug a little deeper and recorded Here We Go, his first live album.

All of Green's fans will agree his live shows are the reason for his large following. This CD has captured everything which makes his live shows fun. From Green's storytelling to just jamming with his band, it is all there. Here We Go has all of Green's classics and a couple of new songs that eventually could be.

His live renditions of "Dance-Hall Dreamer," "I like Texas" and "Here We Go" would be the staples of the CD if it were possible for this album to have staple songs. Picking out the best songs on this album is not an easy task.

Pat Green writes his songs from the heart. The result is an album full of emotion. This record captures the spirit and intensity of the real life experiences that most of Green's songs are based upon.

Here We Go was recorded live in April 1998 at Gruene Hall and Shadow Canyon Dance Hall, which should give the locals of College Station something to get excited about.

Here We Go is a must have for any fan of good old, down-to-earth, boot-tapping, beer-drinking, Texas music. (Grade: A-)

Green means Go

Musician returns to 'where it all started'

Story by Scott Harris

Pat Green! Pat Green! Pat Green!

Anybody remotely near Shadow Canyon tonight will probably hear these cries bellowing out the front door of the dance hall, and anybody inside will probably be doing their best to make their shouts heard over everybody else's.

Green will be making his long awaited return to College Station, playing at the place "where it all started" and actually the same place where his last album, Here We Go, was partially recorded.

Green said he had played many venues
