Critic finds himself under

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Tom DeLay of Texas, the Republican leader who led the drive in the House to impeach President Clinton for lying under oath, now finds himself at the center of his own controversy over truthfulness.

The media spotlight that focused on DeLay as he kept up a steady stream of Clinton criticism has turned into a glare recently as reporters have probed discrepancies between statements he made in a legal proceeding and those on financial disclosure forms he is required to file as a member of Congress.

"Frankly, it's my opinion he lied to me under oath," said Gerald DeNisco, the Houston lawyer who questioned DeLay during a 1994 deposition in a lawsuit filed against the congressman by a business partner.

The former pest exterminator, who is viewed as the Republican most Democrats love to hate now that Newt Gingrich has exited the national stage, accuses Democrats of orchestrating the barrage of critical media coverage.

"I am the most investigated man in America. They're trying to bring me down," DeLay, the No. 3 GOP House leader, said earlier this month.

The man who was questioned regarding a lawsuit filed against him in 1994 by a business partner were trying to control the council because that," DeLay told reporters in a brief interview earlier this month.
