Supernatural

dcTalk

Forefront/Virgin Records

After the surprise change to the runge sound of Jesus Freak from the p-hop of their first three albums, liseners anticipated the follow-up CD to ee how dc Talk would reinvent itself

The long wait for dc Talk's fifth alum, Supernatural, was well worth it.

Not as hard sounding as the previous aloum, Supernatural offers a sampler

Two songs really stand out. "Con-me Me," which generated air play on on-Christian radio stations, has attract-attention with it's passionate lyrics

at tell God, "Without you I'm incom-

The other song has left Christian mu-

c listeners, a probably artists, thinking.

ly Friend (So Long)" tells of a ficti-

ous fourth band member who leaves

The song reminds of artists like Amy ied to cross over from Christian to sec-

e group to find secular music fame.

Grant, Jars of Clay and others who have

The song affirms that dc Talk will ever deny Christ to make it up the mu-

dc Talk fans who have failed to buy

will definitely enjoy it. Those not familar with the group who are looking for

— Cariño Casas

c ladder, although their fictitious e available this record should run to get it. They n environs: very listenable music with substancee held in the filled lyrics would not think their invest-friend did just that.

m 10 a.m. 31 ment wasted. (Grade: A)

late of what is hot in pop music.

A&M Word plete/I'm hopeless/You consume me.

and attenda lents.

Il be practice

AGGIELIFE

od's ord

Christian rock meets alternative hip-hop when dcTalk hits Reed Arena

BY CARIÑO CASAS
The Battalion

rom the hip-hop sound on their self-titled debut album to the pop sound heard on their latest release, Supernatural, dc Talk has evolved into what many call the biggest band in Christian music.

And they will be the biggest Christian act ever to play in Aggieland when they rock in Reed Arena Sunday at 7:30 p.m.

The band first came together 10 years ago when Toby McKeehan, Michael Tait and Kevin Max (then Kevin Smith) met at Liberty University. At first, McKeehan ran the show, writing the music and rapping the lead. The metamorphosis from rap to grunge (on Jesus Freak) to pop came from the growth the members experienced together.

"We've grown up a lot through the years," McKeehan said in a press release. "We're getting past the envy, jealousy and insecurity that's there in any band setting."

This cohesiveness is apparent in their music. Every song on the new album lists the three members as cd writers.

"This is the first record that we all came together and collaborated [on]," Tait said in Christian Entertainment. "In the past, Toby was the chief songwriter, and Kevin and I would come together for a song or two. This time, we said, 'Let's try something different."

In Maranatha Christian Journal, McKeehan said sharing the songwriting responsibilities was difficult, but worth it.

"At first it was a scary process," he said.
"There were lots of fights, lots of arguments, but we kept coming back the next day wanting more. It pushed us, and we earned respect for each other as writers. Collaboration is a tough thing, but a beautiful thing." is more as a ministry, because it crosses over from not only Christian, but it crosses over to the secular charts." he said. "We

The effort paid off. Supernatural debuted at No. 4 on the Billboard Top 200 chart, the highest spot any contemporary Christian album has debuted on the chart. The album was sandwiched between Psycho-Circus by KISS (once called Knights in Satan's Service by their detractors) and Mechanical Animals by Marilyn Manson (whose second album was called Antichrist Superstar).

In the remix of the Doobie Brother's "Jesus is Just Alright" on their third album, Free at Last, McKeehan raps "I'm kicking it Jesus-style/To the ones that think they heard/I did use the 'J' word/'Cause I ain't too soft to say it/Even if DJ's don't play it."

But DJ's are playing it here in the Brazos Valley, Mix 104.7 (KKYS-FM) has been playing the intimate ballad "Consume Me."

Without knowing it comes from a Christian band, the track sounds like a sensual love song to a significant other. But band member said the chorus that says, "You consume me/Like a burning flame running through my veins" is speaking to God.

"We view our relationship with God as very personal," McKeehan said in a press release, "and some people might get upset because the relationship in 'Consume Me' is so passionate and real rather than ritualistic. We wrote this as a spiritual song because to us, faith is a passionate, personal, committed love relationship with Jesus Christ."

John Paul Russell, concert chairperson

John Paul Russell, concert chairperson for Aggie Men's Club and a junior management information systems major, said the organization wants to use dc Talk to spread the message.

"The main reason we brought them over over to the secular charts," he said. "We were hoping to bring in some secular people to this concert and also use it as a word-of-mouth for Christianity."

Aggie Men's Club, a Christian fraternal organization founded in 1984, raised $73,000 from private donations to bring the band to A&M.

Russell said all proceeds from ticket sales after expenses will go to Project Unity.
This concert is expected to attract the largest audience for a Christian act in the area.

Mary Helen Bower, associate director of Reed Arena, said she expects dc Talk ticket sales to exceed 4,000. Bower said the main reason the audience will be larger is that, before Reed Arena, there was no venue larger than Rudder Auditorium, which seats

Tickets are available for $15.50 at the MSC Box Office. The doors will open at 6:30 p.m. The opening acts for dc Talk will be Jennifer Knapp and The W's.

PHOTO COURTESY OF DC TALK

Toby Mckeehan, Michael Tait, and Kevin Max of dc Talk, have crossed over to popular over charts but have kept their Christian mentality. They will play at Reed Arena on Sunday.

