Clarke, the Flyers' general man-WNBA, players seek deal

YORK NEW (AP) Negotiators for the WNBA and its players association returned to the bargaining table Tuesday in an effort to finalize their first collective bargaining agreement. The sides talked for eight hours Monday, trying to resolve differences which caused an apparent agreement to fall apart last week. At that time, both sides claimed the other had injected new terms at the last minute. The league postponed its player draft which had been scheduled for Tuesday, causing Pam

Wheeler, executive director of the WNBA players association, to issue a statement charging league officials with trying to intimidate the players. Earlier, the union and league agreed on a four-year deal that would increase minimum salaries from $15,000 to $30,000 for veterans and $25,000 for rookies. Those figures would increase to $40,000 and $30,000, respectively, by 2002. The benefits package was to
