Supreme Court axes federal ban on casino ads

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court opened the door Monday to full broadcast advertising of casino gambling, complete with pictures of bettors at the tables. The court ruled that a federal ban aimed at protecting compulsive gamblers violates free-speech rights.

The court unanimously struck down the ban on television and radio advertising of casino gambling in states where such gambling is legal. The ban "is so pierced by exemptions and inconsistencies that the government cannot hope to exonerate it," Justice John Paul Stevens wrote for the court.

The American Gaming Association and some legal experts said the decision will allow casinos to advertise gambling even in states that ban casino gambling. The court's opinion did not say so, but it criticized the ban in broad terms.

"The presumption is that consumers are better off if left to judge the value of speech themselves, rather than to have the government judge it for them," Matthew Berry of the Institute for Justice said.

The conservative-libertarian group supported the New Orleans-area broadcasters who challenged the ban.

Stevens wrote for the court that the ban "may not be applied to advertisements of private casino gambling that are broadcast by radio or television stations located in Louisiana where such gambling is legal. More than half the states legalized casino gambling offered either by private companies or by Indian tribes.

"The presumption is that consumers are better off if left to judge the value of speech themselves, rather than to have the government judge it for them."

— Matthew Berry of the Institute for Justice

The Clinton administration argued for the ban, had estimated the "devastating costs" caused by and to be estimated 3 million compulsive gamblers, and said Congress was entitled to address part of the problem by reining in commercial speech.

But Stevens said, "The policy of discouraging gambling, general, and casino gambling, particular, is now deemed unequivocal."

Lott: Trade status of China secure

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate will go along with President Clinton's decision to extend normal trade status to China for another year, Majority Leader Trent Lott said Monday.

Lott, R-Miss., said that even if the House votes to disapprove China's trade status, it was unlikely the Senate would take up the issue.

Clinton on June 3 informed Congress that he was extending normal trade status — formerly called most-favored-nation status — to China for another year. That decision stands unless both chambers pass a motion of disapproval within 60 days after the current trade status expires on July 3.

Speaking to the National Association of Manufacturers, which supports trade ties with China, Lott said anti-China sentiments would be particularly high this year because of allegations of Chinese espionage and attempts to influence American elections, as well as the fallout from NATO's bombing of the Chinese embassy in Belgrade.

"It will be dicier this year because of all that's gone on in the world economy," Lott said. "But he said that we have to recognize that China is a big country in the world economy and we have to trade back and forth with them."

The extension of trade status with China has provoked an annual battle in Congress over the nation's China policy. What Congress has never succeeded in overturning a presidential decision in the 20 years since annual review began.

The administration said it was maintaining good trade relations at this time is particularly important as the two nations complete work on a marketing package that will open the way for China's entry in the World Trade Organization.

Those negotiations were completed this spring but were clouded by deteriorating relations and then halted by Undersecretary of State I. Pickering has traveled to Beijing to discuss the border and try to get the WTO back on track.

TV tip leads police to fugitive

ORLAND, Maine (AP) — A Massachusetts child molester who vanished during his trial more than a year ago, leaving behind a suicide note, was captured in a shootout at a homeless shelter in Maine just hours after being profiled on "America's Most Wanted."

Richard Burdick, 49, was shot in the weekend gun battle and hospitalized, but his wounds were not believed to be life-threatening.

He faces possible life imprisonment in Massachusetts for rape and indecent assault. He was accused of assaulting a girl 17, from the time she was 13.

When Burdick and his brother disappeared, they left a note claiming they had committed suicide.

Investigators were skeptical, in part because the couple claimed they had taken steps to ensure their bodies would not be found for "quite some time," if they were ever found.
