Rain delays Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Singing in the rain since she could not play in it, Alexandra Stevenson did not let a dreary day intrude on her dreamy Wimbledon debut.

Showers washed out play completely yesterday for the first time in two years, and the 30th time in 113 years, giving Jim Courier another 24 hours to figure out how to avoid being beaten by Britain's Tim Henman.

Courier and Henman struck a few balls, none in anger, between cloudbursts, then retreated to the lounge for an afternoon of backgammon and video games — though not with each other. "They didn't sit down and have dinner, but they did say hello," David Felgate, Henman's coach, said. "It's a small locker room, and there are 16 guys in it. There's no running away from each other. Henman led two sets to one, and 4-3 with Courier to serve in the fourth set of a match that began Monday and will resume, weather permitting, today.

Stevenson, an effervescent 18year-old who is into the fourth round as a newly turned pro, showed off her singing talents for the BBC with a show tune while she waited in vain to play fellow American Lisa Raymond.

Steffi Graf also remained on hold, two games from victory at 6-

Belgian qualifier Kim Clijsters. So far the only players to reach the quarterfinals are Andre Agassi

2, 4-2 against

and Gustavo Kuerten, who will play each other on the men's side, and defending champion Jana Novotna and Lindsay Davenport, who will meet on the women's side.

The backup in the schedule means a lot of tennis will have to be crammed into the short span of the rest of the week. If the fourth round can be completed today and the weather forecast is not encouraging — then the quarterfinals likely would be held for both draws on Thursday, instead of being broken up as usual over two

Dallas cornerback wins Toda lawsuit against Dillard's

Cowboys cornerback Zebbie Lethridge $22.5 million yesterday in his lawsuit against a Dillard's department store and a security guard.

Jurors in the 364th District Court made the decision, which stems from a 1995 incident in which Lethridge and two of his friends were accused of stealing a pair of earrings from a Lubbock Dillard's store. Lethridge, who starred for four years as a quarter-back at Texas Tech University, was still with the Red Raiders at the time.

After the 24-year-old was found innocent of the charge in Lubbock Municipal Court, he filed a civil suit against Dillard's and security guard Tom Robison. In the suit, Lethridge and his attorney claimed the store accused him of shoplifting because he is black. Lethridge did not return a phone call from

Williams' agent faces suspension

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Leland Hardy, agent for New Orleans Saints rookie running back Ricky Williams, could face suspension of his certification by the National Football Players' Association, according to a published report.

The Sports Business Journal reported Monday Hardy had failed the NFLPA's open-book test required of agents for the first time this year.

While declining to confirm or deny that Hardy, who works for Baton Rouge-based No Limit Sports, had failed the test, Mark Levin, assistant director of the NFLPA's research department, which administers the test, said,"He has 20 days to app any suspension. If he does if the appeal is denied, then would have to go through entire certification process new agents.
