Underclassmen lead draft's top selection

Duke, point guards dominate rookie class

BY MATT WEBER
The Battalion

Now that the NBA has conducted its annual draft, fans must wait for the start of the 1999-2000 season to see how the former college and high-school standouts perform on the professional level. Among the rookies trying to prove themselves will be these 13 lottery selections:

ELTON BRAND NO. 1 — CHICAGO BULLS

Rumors abounded in the days leading up to the draft, as many expected the Bulls to trade the top pick, but Chicago surprised a lot of people and stuck by Brand. The Duke University sophomore was the early favorite for No. 1 after being named consensus College Player of the Year, but questions about his size (6' 8", 260 lbs.) and durability scared a lot of general managers away. Brand boasts a 7 feet 5 inches wingspan and a knack for grabbing rebounds will have to prove that he can stand up to the NBA's 82-game schedule.

STEVE FRANCIS NO. 2 — VANCOUVER GRIZZLIES

The Grizzlies were elated to get Francis at No. 2, as it was no secret many teams, Charlotte and Toronto among them, coveted the University of Maryland junior. Projected as an NBA point guard, Francis will instead step in at off-guard for Vancouver beside last year's second overall pick, Mike Bibby. Often compared to Allen Iverson, he is capable of playing both guard spots and can score in bunches. However, as with Iverson, critics question whether he can get teammates involved in the offense.

BARON DAVIS NO. 3 — CHARLOTTE HORNETS

In this year's guard-rich draft, Davis was considered by many to be the second-best point guard available behind Francis. A star collegiately at UCLA, the sophomore had hoped to stay close to home with the L.A. Clippers, but the Hornets felt he was just too good to pass up. Davis handles the ball well, can push the tempo when the occasion calls for it and consistently finds the open man. A knee injury that cost Davis a year no longer seems to be a worry. Charlotte has to be concerned, however, with Davis' perimeter shooting.

LAMAR ODOM NO. 4 — L.A. CLIPPERS

Odom was an enigma heading into Wednesday's draft as he refused most pre-draft camps and, at one point, inquired about reclaiming his college eligibility at the University of Rhode Island. Personal problems aside, Odom showed during his sophomore year he was more than capable as a scorer and rebounder and is one of the best at getting his teammates involved. Some have questioned his mental toughness and tendency to pass up open shots in favor of his less-talented supporting cast.

JONATHAN BENDER NO. 5 — INDIANA PACERS

The Pacers have a lot riding on the future success of Bender, trading valuable forward Antonio Davis to Toronto for the fifth pick. Bender, who jumped directly to the pros from Picayune High School in Louisiana, has been described as an effortful scorer with an strong perimeter game for a 6'11" player. Last year, he broke Michael Jordan's McDonald's All-America Game scoring record. However, he has a tendency to fall in love with that perimeter game, and at only 205 pounds, he lacks the bulk to battle underneath with the NBA's power players.

WALLY SZCZERBIAK NO. 6 — MINNESOTA TIMBERWOLVES

Many scouts rated senior swingman Szczerbiak as the best shooter available in the draft. A smart, fundamentally sound player capable of putting up big numbers in a hurry from the "2" or "3" positions, Szczerbiak's NCAA Tournament-leading 30 points per game for the University of Miami (Ohio) and pre-draft performances helped improve his stock leading up to Wednesday. Some have questioned his lack of foot speed, voicing concern that he will struggle to keep up with quicker players defensively or getting his shot off over quicker, more aggressive NBA defenders.

RICHARD HAMILTON NO. 7 — WASHINGTON WIZARDS

Hamilton's performance in UConn's victory over Duke in the NCAA Championship cemented his status in the lottery. The 6'6", 185-pound frame. Hamilton is an offensive spark who is expected to push Calbert Cheaney and Tracy Murray for minutes.

ANDRE MILLER NO. 8 — CLEVELAND CAVALIERS

Cleveland went into the draft looking for a dependable back-up to point guard Steve Miller and settled on University of Utah's Andre Miller. Miller has been compared to the former Mark Jackson and does show many of the skills. He is a leader who gets the ball to the right man at the right time, plays solid defense and goes to the glass. He brings experience to a team-first attitude. On the down side, he is a step slow and is at best a mediocre shooter. Cavaliers hope his winning ways will rub off on the rest of the team.
