LOS ANGELES (AP) Overcoming bad, bad reviews, Will Smith's Wild Wild West won the West and more, opening with $36.8 million over a blistering Fourth of July weekend at the box office, according to estimates yesterday.

Big Daddy with Adam Sandler dropped to second place but still reaped an impressive $26.4 million over the four-day holiday weekend, while Tarzan also remained strong with $19.2 million for third place for Friday through Monday.

The South Park feature opened to a respectable $14.8 million in fourth despite tougher enforcement of the R rating, which limited the audience. Spike Lee's latest film, Summer of Sam, opened to a lackluster $7.8 million in eighth place.

Overall, the box office was up 16 percent from Independence Day weekend last year, which had Armageddon as the big opener, easily keeping the year on a record pace, said Paul Dergarabedian, president of box office tracker Exhibitor Relations Co. Inc.

John Leguizamo was 14 in the summer of '77. New York City was sweltering. The discos were hotter. And there was a maniac out there with a .44-caliber handgun.

"I remember it. Yeah, I do," Leguizamo says. "It was coming of age for me. That whole summer, I was on a mission. I was trying to de-virginize myself." At night, he remembers, he would put on his Lothario outfit: a three-piece Polyester disco suit and an unbuttoned shirt with huge lapels. 'I would take my mother's mascara and draw a mustache and a beard. I would go to clubs with a fake ID from Times Square. I would say, 'Hey, lemme in. I'm a midget, man!'''

Outside, he recalls, the bodies continued to mount.

"There was paranoia. People wouldn't even hang out in the streets. Lovers' lanes were empty. I used to bike there all the time to see if I could learn something - you know, through all the fogged up windows. But there wasn't anything. It was Twenty-two summers later, Leguizamo has returned to those murderous days in Spike Lee's Summer of Sam, a story about neighborhood friends living during the Son of Sam's bloody reign. A former postal worker named David Berkowitz was arrested 22 years ago and confessed to fatally shooting six people and wounding seven others. He later said he took orders a neighbor's black Labra retriever named Sam.
