Blair Witch Project bigger is not always better

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Blair Witch Project, shot for $60,000, is a reminder for movie moguls that filmmakers with cheap cameras can outdo a $70 million blockbuster at the box office.

Blair Witch cost just $60,000 for filmmakers Eduardo Sanchez and Daniel Myrick to produce, plus $300,000 in other production expenses by distributor Artisan Entertainment.

It has already had made 100 times what it cost, with $28.5 million coming in over the weekend, and could become the most profitable movie ever made, in terms of return on an original investment.

"Every year there's a phenomenon, and Blair Witch is this year's."

— Chuck Viane
Head of distribution, Disney

A sequel already is in the works, said Artisan President Amir Malin, and sales of Blair Witch books, T-shirts and other merchandise are bringing in millions more.

Movie history is filled with stories of out-of-nowhere films, such as Easy Rider, Dirty Dancing or The Full Monty, that rise to commercial success. Even Steven Spielberg and George Lucas were relatively unknown before Jaws and Star Wars launched the era of movie blockbusters.

With the movie expected to be in 1,100 theaters to about a weekend, it's a safe bet it will easily pass $100 million in sales.

In terms of return on investment,
