Tennessee teen shoots parents

BEDFORD, Tenn. (AP) — A 15-year-old boy killed his father with a rifle yesterday, then shot and wounded his mother when he fired at the bathroom door she was hiding behind, police said.

Matthew Hardrick was captured shortly after the shooting when he crashed his family's car about 25 miles from home.

"He was crying and banging his head against the side of the window" of the police car following his arrest, Columbia police Lt. James Hanvy said.

Police did not say if they knew of a possible motive. The boy was charged with first degree murder and attempted murder.

Officers learned of the shooting when the boy's mother, Eleanor Hardrick, waved over a motorist outside her home. She was bleeding from a bullet wound to the leg and had gashes on her head.

Police arrived to find the body of James Hardrick, 59, in the living room.

He was lying on a couch when he had been shot in the head with a rifle.

Hardrick said her son shot her husband. She said she ran into a bathroom and locked the door, but her son shot off the knob, wounding her, Bedford County Sheriff Clay Parker said.

When she ran outside, her son followed and beat her, then took off in the car.

Hardrick, a sophomore at Shelbyville Central High School, has a juvenile arrest record but police refused to give details.

Hardrick, 53, was listed in fair condition at a hospital. Bedford is 45 miles south of Nashville.

Breast milk linked to HIV

CHICAGO (AP) — HIV-infected women have a 50 percent chance of passing the virus from their mothers to their babies, a study conducted in the nation of Malawi found.

The study is the first to show that mothers with HIV pass it along through their breast milk as long as they breast-feed, though the risk is higher if babies' early months, said author, Dr. Paolo G. M. T. de Souza, National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases.

Past studies have shown that breast-feeding transmission of HIV is 4 percent to 20 percent.

Breast-feeding is not recommended for women with HIV in the United States, where formula is plentiful.

In developing countries where formula is scarce, the World Health Organization recommends women breast-feed their risk and make their choice.

School board changes ruling on wearing religious symbols

GULFPORT, Miss. (AP) — A Jewish student told to hide his Star of David necklace at school may wear it freely, the school board said in reversing its ruling that the pendant could be viewed as a gang symbol.

"When we made the decision last week, it was based on information from the security officers only," Harrison County School Board president Randy Williams said after Monday's vote. "But we realized that it infringed on freedom of religious expression, and that freedom supersedes the safety issue."

The School Board voted unanimously to exempt religious symbols from its policy prohibiting students from wearing anything that could be viewed as a gang symbol.

Ryan Green, a junior at Harrison Central High School, wore his Star of David pendant at registration and on the first day of school early this month. He was told to tuck it beneath his shirt because it could be interpreted as a gang symbol.

Security officials had told board members that gang symbols incorporate six-pointed stars and the Star of David could be confused as such. The board unanimously upheld the anti-gang policy.

Ryan's parents asked school officials to reconsider the policy and the American Civil Liberties Union Friday asked a court to strike it down.

Facing increasing pressure and public attention, the school board met last week with members of the Jewish community and decided to reconsider. Ryan's father, Tom Green, said he was excited by the decision.

"It's a wonderful feeling," he said. "We are proud. As a father to a son this is the best principal can teach him: Stand up for your rights."

Study suggests diabetic drivers pose danger

CHICAGO (AP) — Diabetics often decide to drive even when their blood-sugar levels are so low that they could lose coordination and even black out, a study suggests.

"That is not to mean that they should necessarily have their drivers' privileges taken away or restricted," said Dr. William L. Clarke of the University of Virginia Health Sciences Center at Charlottesville.

Clarke said diabetics should be aware of the danger of relying on their ability to detect low blood sugar without measuring it.

Almost 45 percent of the time, the diabetics in the study said they would drive when they believed their blood sugar to be below 70 milligrams per 10th of a liter of blood.

Previous research among diabetics using driving simulators has shown that blood-sugar levels below 65 lead to loss of control — swerving, spinning and wandering off the road.

The participants all had type 1 diabetes, which affects about 1 million Americans. All diabetics must take insulin several times a day, to help metabolize sugar into energy.

The findings were published Wednesday's Journal of the American Medical Association.

Previous studies have conflicting data about whether type 1 diabetics have a higher rate of traffic accidents because of fluctuations in blood sugar, said. He and his colleagues said they will analyze accident rates of the participants.

Welcome Home, Dr. Gayle

Anderson-Smith-Zivney & Associates is pleased to announce the association of L. Justin Gayle, M.D. specializing in Obstetrics & Gynecology

Dr. Gayle was born and raised in College Station. Son of L. and Melody Gayle, long-time residents of College Station. Dr. Gayle is a graduate of A&M Consolidated High School at Texas A&M University. Upon graduation from A&M, Dr. Gayle attended medical school at the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center College of Medicine and served as president of his medical school class. He completed his residency training in Obstetrics & Gynecology at the Texas A&M University Health Science Center/Scott & White Memorial Hospital where he served as Chief Resident. Following residency, Dr. Gayle joined the Sadler Clinic in Conroe where he had a busy private practice in Obstetrics & Gynecology. He served as the Director of Urogynecology and Pelvic Reconstructive Surgery and the Vice Chair of Obstetrics & Gynecology at Conroe Regional Medical Center.

Dr. Gayle could not pass up the opportunity to return to College Station and join the practice of Anderson, Smith, Zivney & Associates. "The chance to return to the area and practice medicine has been a dream of mine since the day I started medical school," says Gayle.

Dr. Gayle and his wife, Marilyn, have three children and are active in church and family activities. His enthusiasm for leading a healthy lifestyle is evident in his love for the outdoors, sports, and recreation.

Dr. Gayle is an advocate of patient education and promotes the awareness of women's health care issues. He will be presenting public seminars on "Women's Health Talk," beginning in September. Dr. Gayle will lecture on such topics as hormone replacement, cancer screening, options to hysterectomy, and urinary incontinence.
