Sanders expected to return before Smith

IRVING (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys know they'll have Deion Sanders back this season, maybe even in September. They're not as sure about Kevin Smith.

Smith, who started at cornerback opposite Sanders most of last season, will be out four to six weeks while trying to rehabilitate a lower back injury.

His absence adds a bit of urgency to Sanders' return from a severe toe problem. Cowboys owner Jerry Jones said yesterday it is possible that Sanders will be ready for the Sept. 12 opener against Washington.

"I'm not expecting it, but it could happen," Jones said. "I do like the progress he's making. He's doing some things to simulate coverage." A bye during the third week of the season helps Dallas ease injured players back into the lineup. The Cowboys play their third game Oct. 3.

Smith, who lost his spot on the first team late last year but was expected to open this year in Sanders' place, has been trying to recover from a bulging disk in his lower back that was discovered in June.

"This year's team is different from last year's team," Woolsey said. "We don't have one standout performer. Our team is very athletic and has a lot of experience with the return of five starters, so we've got a lot more depth than the other teams."

As a preseason All-Big 12 team member, Woolsey will be looked upon to help lead the Aggies to their first Big 12 title. The Aggies are currently picked to finish second in the conference behind the University of Nebraska, the defending Big 12 Champions.

With all of the returning starters on this year's team, Corbelli feels Woolsey will be a strong leader for the Aggies this season in their championship run.

"Amber is a hard worker and has been very dedicated throughout her years at A&M," Corbelli said. "She took on a lot of responsibility beginning her sophomore year when she was a starter. I think she will rise to the occasion with her game and as a leader."

VOLLEYBALL

The Aggies return five starters and 10 letterwinners to this year's squad. The 6-foot-3 Woolsey earned All-Big 12 honors last season, and was named to the preseason All-Big 12 team.

Moskovic, who was also a preseason All-Big 12 selection, was named to Volleyball Magazine's Freshman All-America Team and was selected Big 12 Freshman of the Year.

Other returning starters include outside hitters Summer Strickland and Michelle Cole, and middle blocker Lauri Leahy.

Woolsey said the Aggies hope to avoid a mid-season slide similar to ones in past seasons, which have hindered A&M's championship hopes.

"We want to stay focused and not have our slump in the middle of the season like we usually do," she said. "If we can get through that, it will be a big accomplishment."

Corbelli said being more balanced and having more experience should help the Aggies improve.

"Last year, our team was very young on the court. We depended on one player to make all the big plays," she said. "This year, we're much more balanced and won't depend on one person to do everything."

"I think we'll have a lot of success because we have so much experience."

The Aggies will open their season this weekend at the L&L/Michigan State Volleyball Classic in East Lansing, Mich. A&M's first home game will be Tuesday, Sept. 3, against Southwest Texas State.
