the Individualists and the Futurists how the association is already present on campus.

"We haven't done a good job of telling them where their money is going," she said. "Letting them know that their money sent the Aggie Band and the yell leaders to away games or that the association is a major supporter of Muster would certainly get more former students involved."

Class said the association is also planning parties before Midnight Yell Practice, organizing direct mail programs and looking into a satellite office in the MSC to increase awareness of the association among current students.

Monica Harmon, Class of '97 and an assistant lecturer in speech communications, said she experienced the network of Aggies within a week of graduation when someone saw her ring and offered her a job.

"After I explained to him that I didn't need a job and was going to graduate school, he told me, 'When you get your master's degree, give me a call,'" she said. "You always hear about Aggie ring stories, but I had no idea it would happen so fast."

News In Brief

Honor society seeks nominations

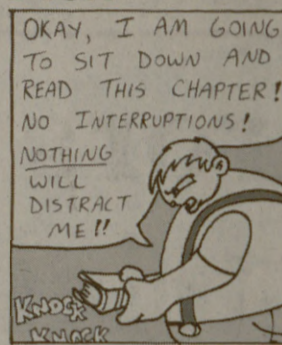

The Alpha Eta chapter of the Phi Beta Delta international honor society seeks nominations from students, faculty and staff members interested in membership.

Junior and senior nominees must have a G.P.R. of at least 3.2, and graduate students must have at least a 3.5 G.P.R.

United States citizens are selected on the basis of successfully completing an overseas study program approved by their institutions.

Faculty and staff members are nominated by deans and administrators, or by two active members of the society.
