Death toll rises in Greek quake

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Greek and Turk rescuers found themselves working side-by-side yesterday for the second time in less than a month despite the historical animosity between the two nations. The death toll from Tuesday's earthquake in Athens rose above 60.

A 20-member Turkish team was the first foreign unit to reach the city's most battered areas. As hundreds of people looked on, they joined Greeks slowly chipping through concrete at a collapsed cleaning products factory in search of 30 workers trapped underneath.

"It is good," Iskender Egeir, part of the Turkish team of rescuers and doctors, said "This is the second time we meet the Greeks. Now it is our turn."

Turks praised Greece for the quick and extensive help following the giant earthquake in Turkey Aug. 17 that claimed more than 15,000 lives. Their teamwork caused political leaders on both sides of the Aegean Sea to reassess their political positions. The two nations have nearly gone to war three times in the past 25 years over territorial disputes.

More bodies than survivors were dragged from under sharp-edged slabs of concrete yesterday, and dozens of other people were reported missing in working-class apartment blocks and Gypsy camps.

Officials said at least 61 people died and more than 2,000 were injured from Tuesday's magnitude 5.9 quake — many by falling glass or debris as they raced from homes and offices.

Inspectors began assessing fractured buildings that could leave thousands homeless.

Archaeologists began trying to salvage some items toppled at the National Archaeological Museum and undertook the painstaking review of the ancient artifacts. The museum will be closed for three days while officials assess the damage.

The Acropolis sustained minor damage as small chunks of rock falling off a part of the Parthenon's columns, Culture Ministry officials said. But Greece's best-known attraction remained open to visitors entering columns of the Temple of Athena spared harm.

Searching for survivors among the rubble, rescue crews punched out crawling paths with picks and jackhammers. At least three were located deep in the debris late Tuesday, but Fire Chief Panaghiotis Fouras said he was doubtful many others would emerge.

"Please, tell me everything will be OK," pleaded a man embracing a friend in the rubble. He was among those pinned under debris of concrete and steel.

Tens of thousands of people have been to go back indoors, fearful of aftershocks as strong as 4.7. Plaza lots and sidewalks became makeshift camps. Some people bedded down on blankets pulled outside. State-run shelters were opened for those needing to spend the night.

Jasper Trial Education Initiatives

Student Dialogue Groups
The purpose of the Dialogue Groups is to facilitate informed discussions about the specifics of the trial and hate crimes in general. Group discussions will provide students an opportunity to share their thoughts and feelings around the Jasper incident and trial. Specific topics will address social justice, interrupting the cycle of intolerance, social and individual change and building alliances.

Dialogue Group Sessions will occur once a week during the following weeks. Sessions will be one to two hours in length.

- September 13 - 17
- September 20 - 24
- September 27 - October 1
- October 4 - 8
- October 11 - 15
- October 18 - 22

Facilitators will determine a day, time and location that accommodates their group. Call the Office of Diversity Education at 862-2000.
