News in Brief

Counseling Service to offer screening

Student Counseling Service (SCS) is offering free anxiety disorder screening program today at 4 p.m. in MSC 226.

Dr. Andy Smith, associate director of counseling and coordinator of training for SCS said that if a student is experiencing feelings of panic, fear or stress, the free screening program will determine if the individual has anxiety disorders.

He said anxiety disorders are treatable mental illnesses that affect more than 23 million Americans each year.

Smith said there will be an hour-long informational, then an opportunity for students to take a screening instrument, a questionnaire and finally, an opportunity to sit individually and privately with a professional to go over the inventory.

Informational materials on anxiety disorders and other mental illnesses and referral will be given as needed.

The free program will include an educational presentation with a video, an anonymous written self-test and the opportunity to meet with a health professional.

"The Student Counseling Service is not diagnosing or treating for any anxiety disorders," he said, "but is providing information, free screening and referral if needed."

Celebration marks profs achievements

The celebration of the professional career achievements of Dr. Frank Albert Cotton, professor of chemistry, will be today from 5 to 10 p.m. at the Presidential Conference Center in the George Bush

Library and Presidential Conference Center.

Every year, Texas A&M honors a member of the faculty for his or her achievements. Cotton, director of the Laboratory for Molecular Structure and Bonding, will be honored by former colleagues from the United States and Great Britain, who will discuss his achievements in three segments: the early years, the middle years and the Texas A&M years. The keynote speaker will be Tobin J. Marks, Morrison Professor of Chemistry at Northwestern University.

Cotton's accomplishments include producing more than 100 Ph.D.'s, more than 1,400 research publications, the Gold Medal of the American Institute of Chemists and the Robert A. Welch Award in Chemistry.

Fraternity focuses on aiding students

Phi Beta Sigma fraternity's annual Sigma Week, themed "Young Americans Ready to Make Power Moves," began yesterday with a church service and will continue through Friday.

All students are welcomed to attend the nightly programs, which include money management, a question-and-answer session between freshmen and upperclassmen and a Jazz session.

Phil Coleman, Phi Beta Sigma president and a senior electrical engineering major, said they chose to use the week to enlighten people on issues that impact people, as opposed to throwing parties.

Tonight at "Stackin' Dollars," a speaker will discuss ways to manage money during college and after graduation at 7 p.m. in Rudder 302.

Carlos Orozco, an SCS counselor, said the meeting helped the students get to know the counselors better, and when questions arise, they feel comfortable seeking advice.

Similar meetings will be held Oct. 2 and in the spring to familiarize students with the application process of various organizations.
