BILLIARD

"This is his last tour before he retires," Cray said.

"White spends a lot of time at a clinic at various colleges for example, Texas A&M [University]. The last time Jack White performed, he taught his clinic at approximately 2,000 people. He stopped by to watch and participate in the event."

Elaine Rae, a junior psychology major, said she was excited to be able to watch White perform some trick shots.

"I've heard about him for a while, and now I finally see how White plays," she calls, a "family" she said.

"It is a great chance to learn some new tricks from a professional player."

David Hamrick, a senior psychology major, said the performance will be interesting to watch.

"I think it is great to see Jack White is coming to A&M," he said.

"He was a world champion in the '60s, and I wait to see him perform."

GOLF

Coyle said the plan for the course and surrounding areas will market the facilities to students and A&M alumni.

"The Club Corporation of America requests Jack Nicklaus' services," he said. "Nicklaus designs his golf courses with very high, specific quality in mind. This course will have a sprinkling of homes on one side of the fairway, where people can play amongst the elements rather than amongst a subdivision."

Brown said the development around the course will be used to attract tourists.

"People will be able to come to the cities of Bryan and College Station and have a place to stay after they have gone to a sporting event or ... to the [George] Bush Presidential Library [Complex]," he said. "This is a tremendous impact for both the Bryan and College Station communities, in regards to spending."
