Hurricane Irene blows through Caribbean

MIAMI (AP) — Hurricane Irene moved across the Caribbean yesterday, sweeping bands of heavy rain through Cuba and into Florida as it drifted with top sustained winds of nearly 75 mph.

At 8 a.m. EDT yesterday, Irene was centered about 125 miles southwest of the Cuban capital of Havana.

It was expected to make a slow northward track.

In Cuba, the hurricane warning covered the Pinar del Rio, Havana, Matanzas and the Isle of Youth.

In Florida, a hurricane watch was issued for the Lower and Middle Keys, including the Dry Tortugas islands, extending up to Craig Key.

Heavy rain already fell in the Miami area, causing a rash of traffic accidents during the morning's commute.

Irene could make landfall within 72 hours just north of Tampa, John Guiney, hurricane forecaster at the National Hurricane Center in Miami, said.

"But we don't want people focusing on that track because this storm will have effects felt in a wide area," he said.

"We still need all the folks in Florida to still be vigilant here, because this system will affect a great portion of the peninsula."

Winds across south Florida were expected to rise, and Florida's southern coastal areas could experience winds of more than 39 mph.

A full evacuation of the Keys is not anticipated, Billy Wagner, Monroe County Emergency Management director said, but officials Wednesday began asking visitors in the lower Keys to leave just in case.

Several public storm shelters were to open in the Keys for people with special needs, those living in mobile homes and others at special risk.

A coastal flood watch was in effect for Broward and Miami-Dade counties.

You are The Aggie Network.

And we need your stories.

Okay Ags, The Association of Former Students needs your help. We know you have at least one special story to tell in regards to your Texas A&M Class Ring — maybe a romance, a friendship made, a business deal struck, a door opened by a fellow Ag. Whatever it is, we want to hear it. As a matter of fact, we might even use it in the Texas Aggie magazine over the next year. So get out a pen and paper or boot up that laptop and get to writing. You can mail, fax or email your story to us using the information below. You know our story and we're waiting for yours.
