Princeton prof Cooper to speak on philosophy

BY BRADY CREEL
The Battalion

En route from Houston to Austin, the 1999 Lone Star Tourist will stop in College Station for a guest appearance today to lecture as a colloquium speaker for the Texas A&M Department of Philosophy & Humanities.

On his tour of four Texas universities, Dr. John M. Cooper, the Stuart professor of philosophy at Princeton University, will speak on his paper, "Method & Science in On Ancient Medicine" today at 3:45 pm in Bolton Hall 213.

On Ancient Medicine is the title of a Greek medical treatise and is attributed to the Greek physician Hippocrates, after whom the oath all doctors must take — the Hippocratic Oath — is named.

Dr. Robin Smith, head of the Department of Philosophy & Humanities, said ancient Greek medical treatises are useful sources of insight into Greek concepts of science and philosophy.

Smith said "Lone Star Tourist" is a concept originating from a concerted effort among the philosophy departments at A&M, the University of Texas — Austin, Rice University and the University of Houston.

Smith said the four universities work together to coordinate one speaker for each of the institutions, thus reducing expenses. Together, the universities invite one person to speak at all four schools, and by sharing expenses, they are able to get a more notable speaker.

"We are able to get a fairly prominent person in philosophy," Smith said.

Cooper has taught at Princeton since 1981 and served as chair of the philosophy department from 1984 to 1992. He received his education at Harvard University and the University of Oxford and is well-known for his work in ancient Greek philosophy, especially in the area of ethics.

Cooper spoke yesterday at the University of Houston and Rice, and will continue to the University of Texas later this week.

A reception will be held prior to the lecture in Bolton Hall 213.

Columbine experience focus of closed seminar

BY KENNETH MACDONALD

Representatives from the fire and police departments of Littleton, Colorado will speak to 450 other law enforcement, fire and emergency medical personnel from across the nation today at the Bush School of Government and Public Service, about their experiences and the lessons learned from the tragedy at Columbine High School.

The seminar, "Littleton, Colorado: Lessons Learned," has been sponsored by the Texas Engineering Extension Service (TEEX).

Brenda Sims, TEEX public relations director, said the speakers will include major players in the initial official response.

"The instructors will be very candid as to what went wrong and what went right, in case this happens in [the participants'] community," she said.

Sims said there has been tremendous response to seminar.

"People want to come to seminars."

"They have put on one-on-one workshops before, but nothing this comprehensive."

Because of security reasons and the candid topics discussed, security for this event is expected to be tight. The sessions will be closed to the public and media.

U. S. Rep. Kevin Brady of the 8th District of Texas gave the opening remarks. Keynote speakers will include Littleton Fire Department Chief William Pessemier and Captain Dave Walcher of Jefferson County Sheriff's Office, Sims said.

On April 20, Dylan Klebold and Eric Harris walked into Columbine High School and opened fire, leaving 12 students, one teacher and the gunman dead.

Isabel Bustos, CAMAC public relations director and a sophomore education major, said it is necessary to honor those who have influenced the Mexican culture.

"This holiday is a time to honor those who have lived and passed away," she said.

Lozano said the celebration is open to everyone.

"[CAMAC] teach traditions and what the Mexican culture stands for," he said. "There will be no biased attitudes, and I hope people are not afraid of the cultural undertones. Everyone is welcome if you have lost a loved one or not."
