Sharing our grief

Schools across the nation send condolences to A&M

BY JEANETTE SIMPSON
The Battalion

Current Texas A&M students are not alone in sharing in the loss of the eleven Aggies who died in the fall of stack, people from throughout the nation shared their condolences and prayers with Texas A&M students, faculty and staff yesterday as news of the accident spread.

Students at Texas A&M University-Galveston have canceled their annual Bonfire, which was scheduled for tomorrow, to show support for the students of A&M.

Todd Southerland, director of Student Activities, said A&M-Galveston has constructed a Bonfire parallel to A&M's Bonfire for the past seven years. He said the Galveston campus actually travels to College Station to pick up their Centerpole each year.

Southerland said the student body president and student senators were traveling to College Station to offer the support of the Galveston campus.

"We wanted to show our condolences," he said.

Kristine Hiltunen, chair of the Traditions Committee at A&M-Galveston and a junior marine biology major, said the University of Texas Medical Center in Galveston held blood drives yesterday and many students donated blood to help the effort.

"[The students] want to show [students in College Station] that the spirit of the Twelfth Man is definitely felt," she said.

Leaders from the University of Texas-Austin, the University of California-Berkeley and Texas Tech University sent letters to A&M expressing their sorrow and sadness.

Robert M. Berdhal, chancellor of the University of California-Berkeley, addressed A&M students directly in a press release yesterday. He said he knows that the strength and spirit of the Texas Aggies will bring them through this time of suffering.

The University of Texas Ex-Students Association has canceled the Texas A&M Hex Rally and has replaced it with a candlelight Unity Gathering at the University of Texas Clock Tower. The gathering will be held Monday at 9 p.m. and is open to everyone. In addition, the University of Texas Clock Tower will be darkened Monday in memory of the accident victims.

University of Texas President Larry R. Faulkner will speak at the Unity Gathering. Mack Brown, University of Texas head football coach, will also be speaking at the ceremony. Faulkner said in a press release issued yesterday that in the wake of this accident Texans must come together and help A&M students, faculty and family deal with this terrible tragedy.

Ashlee Thames, external vice president for Texas Tech University Student Government, also expressed the deepest regards from the Texas Tech student body in a statement to The Battalion.

Not only did other universities send their condolences, but representatives in the United States government and the Texas Lieutenant Governor Rick Perry, class of '72, also sent their thoughts and prayers to the A&M community.

Perry, class of '72, who spoke at the memorial service held in Reed Arena last night, encouraged all Texans to pray for those impacted by this accident, their families, friends and the entire student body of A&M.

U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm (R-Texas) said in a press release that the sudden loss of young promising students is tragic, and the students and their families are in the thoughts of prayers of everyone.

U.S. Rep. Joe Barton, Class of '72, offered in a press release whatever assistance that he could offer to A&M, along with his most heartfelt sympathy.

Kristi Kinard, a junior speech communication major, said Aggies began coming together in aid as soon as the tragedy struck, before police or EMS could respond.

Kinard's day began at 3:30 a.m. when a friend who was camping out for football tickets at G. Rollie White called to tell her people were asking for anyone with CPR certification to come and help at the site.

Kinard said she and her roommate were put on standby and prayed together while they waited to go help.

"It was just really unexpected, no one would have thought Bonfire would fall," Kinard said. "It's been really neat to see how everyone has pulled together. It really shows what a good school this is and how much everyone cares."

Joelle Wall, president of the A&M Traditions Committee and a senior psychology major, said the committee notified its 40 members of the need to share the word about memorials
