Puxsutawney Phil Groundhog Day revealed six more weeks of winter

PUNXSUTAWNEY, Pa. (AP) — With bitter cold and fresh snowfall as confirmation, part-time weatherman and full-time groundhog Puxsutawney Phil saw his shadow this morning and predicted six more weeks of winter.

Spectators jumped and danced to keep warm in the 15-degree air as the groundhog's forecast was reported by his handlers.

The bitter cold may have deterred spectators who lacked Phil's lush fur. Organizers said they anticipated only 8,000 or 9,000 visitors, instead of the 15,000 who usually turn out.

"My toes are frostbitten, but it warms up if you start dancing," said Dan Pellam of Emporium, who was making his first visit to Phil's lair.

The Groundhog Day tradition is rooted in a German superstition that if an animal casts a shadow on Feb. 2 — the Christian holiday of Candlemas — bad weather is coming.

In the 111 years since German farmers began the festival in Puxsutawney, the morning of Feb. 2 has evolved into an elaborate show of hoodwinkery.

In years past, members of the Inner Circle, the club that stages the annual midwinter festival, voted the night before whether or not Phil would see his shadow, rain or shine.

Skies had been cloudy throughout Tuesday and into today, with snow falling much of the time.

In this central Pennsylvania town of 6,700 people, Phil sees his shadow most years. Only 14 times has he predicted an early spring.

Phil's city cousin, New York's Staten Island Chuck, agreed with today's forecast.

Chuck wandered out of his hut at the Staten Island Zoo and saw his shadow around 7:30 a.m., said zoo spokeswoman Lorraine Austin.

That didn't discourage Georgia's prognosticating groundhog, General Beauregard Lee, who emerged from his home in Lilburn to predict an early spring.

And in Sun Prairie, Wis., Jimmy the Groundhog predicted his fourth straight early spring, with his human companions heartily hoping he would be right again.

The security (VPN) is there to allow the travelers (off-campus users) to get into the secured area (behind the firewall), so they can catch their flight (access firewalled resources), and keep terrorists (hackers) from disrupting the flight (damaging programs).

The VPN is available first by claiming a VPN account in CLAIM and then visiting the network page.

tion, that we should come to them in person, rather than denouncing them on the Senate floor," Kessler said.

The "Thank You" resolution was presented to the Student Senate to recognize the positive effects former director Dr. Ben Welch had on the Department of Student Activities. Welch is now director of the Center for Executive Development at the Lowry Mays College of Business.

"I don't know many things in my life that mean as much to me as this resolution," Welch said. "I will always relish and treasure the involvement I had and will continue to have with the students at Texas A&M University."

Four new resolutions came before the Senate and were approved for further review.
