

Gore wins Delaware primary

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — Vice President Al Gore won the Delaware presidential primary Saturday, outdistancing Bill Bradley in an election neglected by the Democratic campaigners, in voting that drew as sparse as the stakes.

Gore won comfortably in a primary that was only a popularity contest, a state-run straw poll.

The vice president captured 57 percent of the vote, the former senator from New Jersey, 40 percent.

Gore, taking a day off in Washington, telephoned a union leader his thanks for the victory. "He said we took him over the top," said Mike Begatto, executive director of the AFL-CIO Public Employees Council.

"Al Gore and the Gore campaign appreciate the support of the people of Delaware today," said spokesperson Chris Lehane. "We hope to also earn that support caucus day."

That will be March 27, when Delaware Democrats begin choosing their 22 nominating delegates. The state scheduled its primary near the start of the campaign season in an effort to gain influence, but Democrats could not select delegates this soon without violating party rules.

By the time they do, after the major state primaries earlier in March, the contest may be settled.

With the candidates bypassing the state, the primary vote was light, about 5 percent of registered voters.

Their verdict was Gore with 6,349 votes (57 percent) and Bradley with 4,465 votes (40 percent).

Perennial fringe candidate Lyndon H. LaRouche got the rest.

Gore scored heavily with voters who said they were looking for experience. One in four said that was the quality they wanted in a candidate, and the vice president got 9 out of 10 of their votes, according to a Voter News Service poll.

VNS, a consortium of the Associated Press and the major television networks, interviewed voters leaving their polling places.

Those interviews also showed that the vice president won overwhelmingly over voters from union households.

"If anyone should get the credit for this Gore win today, it should be the CIO," Chris Coons, a Gore organizer, said.

Benjamin J. Matvey, Bradley's volunteer chairperson, said the low turnout was his candidate. But he said "they won, we lost, there's no spin on it."

Delaware was Gore's third straight victory, by landslide margins. Gore won the New Hampshire primary last Tuesday with a 4-point edge on Bradley.

Neither Gore nor Bradley made a stop in Delaware, and the volunteers who campaigned there did it without national help. The candidates had they would stay away, wary of friction with Hampshire, when the leadoff primary state was defending its status against calendar encroachment.

Gore won the Iowa caucuses with a margin of 2-to-1 over Bradley, and beat him 50 percent to 40 percent in New Hampshire. Under Democratic rules only those starting-point states could choose delegates before March 7.

The Republicans have no such restriction. George W. Bush and Steve Forbes are campaigning in Delaware's GOP primary on Tuesday. Sen. John McCain, the big winner in New Hampshire, skipped aim at later targets.

To avoid a conflict with New Hampshire, the Republicans opted out of the state-run primary Saturday to vote in one of their own three days later. The contest offers 12 new voters, a pittance in the national campaign, but a stake to go with the winning Delaware will deliver.

Forbes' self-financed campaign has been shaken by defeat in Iowa and a third place in New Hampshire. He rolled around the second smallest state on tour, saying the McCain victory in New Hampshire proved there would be no nation of Bush. "There's nothing inevitable now," he said.

Crash site mapped

PORT HUENEME, Calif. (AP) — Navy crews mapped more of the wreckage of a Boeing 737-400 that crashed into the ocean last week, leaving the wreckage alone but collecting some man remains.

The National Transportation Safety Board wants a detailed picture of the craft debris before pieces of the plane brought to the surface.

Exactly what will be brought up depend on further interpretation of the data and cockpit voice recorder, which were still being analyzed in Washington, an NTSB spokesman said.

"The ships have been out all night long," said Terry Williams, NTSB's mapping that's going on. "The process, if they find any bodies at the main they're bringing them up."

The debris area is about 10 miles shore in the Santa Barbara Channel, covering an area about the size of a football field in water 640 feet deep.

Meanwhile, more memorials were held for families and friends of the 28 people lost with the plane. Among them a service by Cardinal Roger Mahony, archbishop of Los Angeles, who lives near Los Angeles International Airport.

The Alaska Airlines MD-83 crash week ago, killing all 88 people on board during a flight from Puerto Vallarta, Mexico, bound for San Francisco and Seattle.

The plane's voice recorder showed for at least 30 minutes prior to the crash pilots were struggling to correct a problem with the tail-mounted horizontal stabilizer, which they said had jammed.

Witnesses who saw the plane go said it rolled upside down and spiraled into the ocean.

The Ventura County Medical Examiner's Office, which is responsible for identifying the victims, has said that it is a nearly complete "body." Sheriff spokesman Eric Nishimoto said it will be a week before any are identified.
