Child dies in psychiatric hospital

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A 9-year-old boy has died after psychiatric hospital workers pinned him to the floor during a violent struggle.

Randy Steele died Monday afternoon at North Central Baptist Hospital, a day after the incident at Laurel Ridge Hospital.

A spokeswoman for the psychiatric hospital said the boy had been at the locked facility since Jan. 7.

He reportedly became violent Sunday afternoon and scuffled with two mental health workers, she said.

As staff workers restrained the boy, holding his arms and wrestling him to the floor, he began to struggle to breathe, spokeswoman Donna Burtanger said.

"He was becoming very violent, quite aggressive," Burtanger said. "They were trying to calm him down."

Police spokesman Al Ballew said the boy showed signs of trauma on his face and abdomen.

Until police get an autopsy report, investigators are handling the case as an apparent sudden death, Ballew said.

"We feel our staff acted professionally and in full accordance with all operating procedures," Burtanger said. "They are specially trained in methods of physical restraint."

It was the second time in less than three years a young patient has died after being restrained by Laurel Ridge workers.

In August 1997, a 16-year-old girl died immediately after a violent struggle with staff members. The Bexar County medical examiner's office ruled the girl died from a previous heart condition.

On Jan. 25, a 15-year-old girl was killed when she tried to escape the hospital and ran into highway traffic on Loop 1604.

Judge orders depositions in corruption case

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge Monday ordered depositions of two federal prosecutors, an FBI agent and key witnesses in the public corruption case against Texas prison chief James A. "Andy" Collins.

U.S. District Judge Lynn N. Hughes' ruling could negate the immunity offers made by the government to Michael and Patrick Graham, Houston businessmen admitted felons who are the key witnesses in three major corruption cases.

Since falling into tax trouble in early 1996, the Grahams have been the centerpiece witnesses of separate federal investigations in Louisiana and Texas into Collins, former Gov. Edwin Edwards and former Houston Mayor Jesse W. Hofheinz.

Defense lawyers want to find out what the Grahams offered in return for their testimony during a 1996 meeting with federal investigators in New Orleans. Last month, Judge Hughes delayed the start of Collins' trial to continue probe extent of the immunity offer.

Collins is accused of accepting $20,000 in kickbacks from Canadian businessman Yank Barry, owner of VitalPro. Prosecutors allege Collins, then director of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice, in exchange approved a $37.7 million contract for a soybean-based meat substitute made by VitalPro.

"It appears they did not go through the normal, formal procedure to obtain immunity for the Grahams."

— Lynn N. Hughes
U.S. District Judge

Hughes' order, stemming from a defense motion filed in November, requires the Grahams, assistant U.S. Attorneys in New Orleans, to testify before a grand jury and ended their immunity.

Strasser, Letten and Santini, all based in the Eastern District of Louisiana in New Orleans, made a verbal immunity offer to the Grahams in 1996, federal prosecutors here have acknowledged.

"It appears they did not go through the normal, formal procedure to obtain immunity for the Grahams," Hughes said. "One of the reasons we are ordering depositions is so the people can know what their government is doing."

In December, Hughes ordered the government to turn over every record it had pertaining to the Grahams' immunity after Collins' attorney, Michael Ramsey, filed for a subpoena to probe the agreement.

Collins' trial is delayed indefinitely pending depositions, the first of which Hughes ordered to begin next month. During the hearing, Ramsey also offered once again to testify from a former assistant U.S. Attorney who worked for Houston to forestall a bankruptcy hearing that would force Michael Graham to testify.

Both brothers have pleaded guilty to felonies — Michael to forgery and bankruptcy fraud, Patrick to a theft charge accepting $150,000 as part of a plan to get a convicted felon out of prison. Both admitted failing to pay their 1994 taxes.
