People in the News

Tommy, Pamela Lee sued over dog bite

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tommy Lee and wife Pamela Anderson Lee are headed back to court — this time over their pet Rottweiler.

A woman is suing the couple, claiming she was bitten by the dog during a visit to the couple's hilltop home near Malibu in 1997.

"This dog had a vicious nature, disposition and propensity, which was known or should have been known to the defendants," the lawsuit said.

The woman, Doreen Cott, filed suit in 1998, seeking unspecified damages for medical expenses, loss of wages and other inconveniences. A hearing is scheduled for April 5.

The Lees didn't respond to a telephone message left Monday with Mrs. Lee's publicist.

Lee, the former Motley Crue drummer, and his actress wife divorced in 1998 but have since reconciled. He underwent anger management counseling while on probation for spousal abuse.

Madonna: recording Pie intimidating

NEW YORK (AP) — Madonna wasn't sure if she could do justice to Don McLean's 1971 classic "American Pie."

She told the New York Daily News for Sunday's editions she recorded her own version of McLean's homage to Buddy Holly, Ritchie Valens and the Big Bopper for her new movie The Next Best Thing at the urging of co-star Rupert Everett.

"I thought, 'Who am I to do a cover of a pop classic?' But I was working in the studio on other music, and it was like, 'OK, let's just try it.' And it kind of worked, to my surprise."

Everett also lends his voice to the song in distant background vocals.

"To me, it's a real millennium song," Madonna said. "We're going through a big change in terms of the way we view pop culture, because of the Internet. In a way, it's like saying goodbye to music as we know it — and to pop culture as we know it."
