College Station Police Department, said College Station has been active in NNO but can improve resident participation. "It has been pretty successful, but we have a long way to go in getting more people involved,

Johnson said. Johnson said College Station is at a disadvantage because, with the high number of college students in town, neighborhoods tend to change frequently. "With a college town, students move around almost every semester in some cases," Johnson said.

Johnson said she knows of four confirmed scheduled block parties, but every year neighborhoods organize events without telling the department, so there are probably more parties planned.

The CSPD and other local law enforcement agencies will be on hand Monday for a kickoff gathering at 5 p.m. in the Sears/Dillards court area of Post Oak Mall. Prizes will be given away by local police officers, and McGruff the crime dog will attend.

Johnson said the kickoff is a good time for police officers to address citizens' questions and concerns
