Cowboys offense in bind

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The $42 million receiver is out for the season. The $85 million quarterback is woozy from his third concussion in 10 games.

The only thing worse than the offensive line that allowed five sacks in the season opener is the defensive line that gave up a franchise-worst 306 yards in rushing. Now they are going on the road, where they have lost eight straight.

Just one game into the season, the Dallas Cowboys and new coach Dave Campo are facing many more problems than an 0-1 start.

Dallas plays Arizona on Sunday without receiver Joey Galloway or quarterback Troy Aikman. The Cowboys are stuck with most of the other players who looked completely lost in a 41-14 loss to Philadelphia.

"We're not what we were four, five years ago," said running back Emmitt Smith. "You don't have Pro Bowlers at every locker today."

Cowboys owner Jerry Jones tried patching over rough spots by shaking up the coaching staff for this season, returning Dallas to an offense better suited for Aikman and trading chunks of the future to make Galloway a featured attraction.

Four quarters into the season, the plan has sprung a major leak.

Galloway's spot is going to James McKnight, a backup for five years in Seattle who missed last season with a knee injury.

The new No. 1 receiver is really Raghieb Ismail, who has always done better as a No. 2.

Look at his numbers last season. In three games with Michael Irvin as the primary target, Ismail had two 100-yard games. He had just one in the 12 games after Irvin's injury forced him to be Aikman's top option.

The new quarterback is Randall Cunningham, an All-Pro two years ago who was benched by the Vikings after six games last season.

In hindsight, they blundered by having Galloway in the game through the final minutes. He was hurt on the Cowboys' third-to-last snap.

If the sky-falling-quickly scenario seems familiar, it is because a similar version played out last season in San Francisco.

Years of poor drafting, risky salary cap management and devotion to veterans past their prime caught up to the 49ers in 1999.

Sports in Brief

Aggie freshman in U.S. Open semis

Texas A&M freshman tennis player Tres Davis advanced to the semifinals in the juniors portion of the U.S. Open Thursday.

Davis is the United States' No. 1 ranked junior doubles player and the No. 2 ranked singles player.

Along with partner Robby Gineprel of Marietta, Ga., Davis advanced through the quarterfinals by defeating the No. 2 seed Todor Enev of Bulgaria and Joachim Johansson of Sweden, 3-6, 6-2 and 6-4.

"What an honor it is for Tres to be representing his country and Texas A&M in the semifinals of the U.S. Open doubles," said A&M coach Tim Cass. "The experience he is gaining this week is going to be a plus for our team, and the exposure that Texas A&M is receiving is exceptional."

Earlier in the week, Davis lost to Brian Baker of the United States 2-6, 6-3, 6-4.

Davis, a freshman from Austin, is playing in his fourth grand slam event of the year after seeing action in the juniors portions of the Australian Open, French Open and Wimbledon.

RUNNING BACKS

most likely be the one running the ball and burning the clock.

Ja' Mar Toombs

The Notre Dame defense was ready for Ja' Mar Toombs and limited him to just 1.3 yards per carry. But Toombs is bigger than ever this year, in size, and will be A&M's weapon against defensive lines, opening the ground game even more for Whitaker and Weber.

VOLLEYBALL

A&M's first opponent is Washington Friday at 5 p.m. The Huskies started the season with three straight wins before losing to the University of Texas-San Antonio on Tuesday.

The Aggies will play Eastern Washington at 5 p.m. on Saturday. The Eagles are off to a 1-2 start, but are coming off a 1999 performance that saw them win 24 of 32 games.

The tournament is A&M's last non-conference opponent before playing Missouri on Wednesday.
