Continued from page 1 [Mexico's] Secretary of Defense, Gen. Rafael Ángel Calderón Fournes, said. "The cadets were of Texas A&M's long military tradition and also recognized this were at a world-class university were honored to have them in. During their stay, the cadets participated in all events, including formations, day's Corps run and Midway Practice. On game day, the cadets formed the final unit of the Corps march-in.

Welsh said one of the most significant parts of the experience for Mexican and American cadets was the cultural awareness that they gained.

"We saw a lot of similarities between our governments and "Anything we can do to involve Mexico and Latin America, we should do. It's an honor for A&M."

Veronica Jijon, assistant director of the Office of Latin American Programs at A&M, said Heroic Military College is an officer training school and, after graduation, cadets either straight into the military or go to receive professional degrees.

Heroic Military College is Mexico's oldest military academy. On behalf of the Heroic Military College, the visiting cadets presented Gen. M.T. "Ted" Hoppood, commandant of the Corps, with a saber traditionally worn by their uniforms.

Jijon said programs like this benefit relations between Texas, Mexico and the United States. "Anything we can do to involve Mexico and Latin America, we should do. It's an honor for A&M," she said.

Eduardo Migoni, a Mexican cadet, said he enjoyed his experience at A&M because of the friendly atmosphere.

"I think this is one of the most beautiful universities in America," Migoni said. "The cadets and regular students are very kind and make me feel like one of them because they taught me of their customs and traditions."
