News in Brief

MSC committee to host contest

The third annual "What's Word?" oratorical contest, hosted by the Texas A&M Memorial Student Center (MSC) Business Awareness Committee (BAC), will be at 7 p.m. in MSC 292A. This year's theme "The Right's Movement: Is It Mission Impossible Moving Right Along?" will ask students to discuss the status of the civil rights movement. Joy-Lena Waites, public relations officer of the BAC, said the contest gives students a forum to participate in speech and rhetoric-related activities. The first-place winner will receive $1,000, the second-place winner will receive $750, and the third-place winner will receive $500.

Senate considers regulation bill

Following the confusion surrounding the Spring 2000 leader elections, the Student Senate considered a bill Wednesday that would clearly define a majority vote in the election regulations. The bill was written after the Judicial Board of Texas A&M mandated last year that election regulations be made more clear.

The yell leaders appealed the outcome of the Spring 2000 elections because they were concerned about how the majority was calculated by the election commission. The bill was in its first reading Wednesday and will be voted on at the Nov. 1 meeting.

Texas' first private toll road to open

LAREDO (AP) — Traffic will begin moving this morning on a new route for commercial traffic and tourists heading to Mexico. Camino Colombia Toll Road, Texas' first privately built toll road, was dedicated Wednesday. About 300 people attended the elaborate ceremony at the road's booth and administration building, located about five miles east of the Colombia Solidarity Bridge. Participants praised the investors for creating the road, which was promoted as Mexico's link to the outside world.
