include sheriff, county tax assessor-collector, county attorney and county commissioner. Two people are running for sheriff, three for county tax assessor-collector, one for county attorney and two for county commissioner. Other official positions to be filled within Brazos County are listed on the ballot. Only the citizens from the precincts affected by the outcome are allowed to vote for the candidates. The outcome of all of these positions will be decided Tuesday when polling offices close at 7 p.m.

Three propositions will also be on the ballot. The first, a special bond election, proposes a $18.5 million bond to build a new coliseum for Brazos County.

Susan Gandry, assistant to the county judge, said that this type of facility is needed in Brazos County because the communities have outgrown the current convention centers.

"Reed Arena is property of Texas A&M and is often too expensive to rent out or is unavailable when needed because its first priority is to the University," Gandry said.

"The idea to build such a facility has been studied in the Brazos Valley three times.

"Now we just have to see if the citizens of Brazos County are willing to pay for the facility, despite the fact that they promoted such an idea each time it was mentioned," said Gandry.

The facility would be used to host a variety of public events, such as rodeos, home and garden shows, antique shows, and animal shows, just to name a few. Gandry said the county has also been contacted concerning whether the new coliseum could facilitate an ice hockey team or league.

"It is unknown at this point if such an endeavor to host an ice hockey facility will be undertaken. It is too early to say and we have not considered this possibility wholeheartedly yet," Gandry said.

If the proposition is passed, construction on the building would begin within the next year.

"Once construction is started, considering no unforeseen delays, it will be completed sometime in 2005," Gandry said.

Also on the ballot are two elections concerning the abolition of two official county positions, weigher and county surveyor. Gandry said it is very common for voters to abolish these positions because they are not used very often.

"We have never had a weigher or county surveyor in our county or in office," said Gandry.

This year, one person is running for the position of public weigher.

Forty-four locations are designated as election sites in Brazos County.

"Voters must be registered in the Brazos County in order to vote for the propositions and candidates listed on the ballot," said Gandry.

Polling sites will be open from 6 a.m. to 7 p.m. Tuesday.

ELECTIONS

Another Senate race gaining attention is in Missouri, where the popular Democratic Gov. Mel Carnahan leads polls by as much as 5 points over incumbent Sen. John Ashcroft. The problem — Carnahan died in a plane crash two weeks ago. Because it is too late for him to be replaced by another candidate, the late governor remains on the ballot. His wife, Jean Carnahan, said she will fill his seat if he is elected.

Two key states that could keep Republicans in control of the Senate are Nevada and Virginia. Democrats hold the seats, but Republican candidates lead polls there. Currently, Republicans hold 54 seats out of 100 and are defending 19 out of the 34 up for grabs.

"There is a possibility that the Democrats could capture the house," said political science professor Dr. Kim Hill. "There is a possibility the House of Representatives could get tighter, too. Republicans have a very slim margin."

Most of the 11 governor races across the United States remain competitive. Democrats are hoping to pick up governorships in Montana, North Dakota and West Virginia. Republicans may win in New Hampshire, where Democratic Gov. Jeanne Shaheen is battling for a term after being unable to solve an education-funding crisis. Vermont Democratic Gov. Howard Dean is also facing controversy — his positive stance on recognizing gay relationships as "civil unions" is still debated.

Hill said the Texas Senate vote will be fairly predictable. "Kay Bailey Hutchison will walk away with the seat," he said.

Hutchison's opponent, Gene Kelly, has waged a key campaign. According to the Associated Press, the Democratic Party has distanced itself from Kelly, who was not present at the Democratic National Convention.

ball on its next drive, giving the Cowboys possession with 5:53 left.

After driving 56 yards on 10 plays, the Pokes were ready for the upset. With first-and-10 on the Aggie 15, OSU went for the end zone through the air three straight plays.

On fourth-and-10, OSU tried for 6 once more but came up short on a controversial out-of-bounds call with 37 seconds left.

Slocum said later that, while he expected a tough game from the Cowboys, he did not expect it to be as tough as it was.

"We were very fortunate to win this game," Slocum said. "I was concerned going into this game because this was an improved team."

This week, the other team from Oklahoma, the No. 1 Sooners, will come to Glenn and his teammates. The Sooners and the Aggies will face off at Kyle Field at noon Saturday at Kyle Field.

said coach G. Guerrieri. "They stuck in certain moments, and we've got a better job of that."

A&M finished second in the regular season and took the second place spot in the tournament. Defender Amber Reynolds, fielders Heather Wiebe and Andrea Strutz were named to the 2003 All-American Championships All-Tournament team.

"This team has worked through adversity all year long, and have set some very high standards, and have achieved those standards through hard work," Guerrieri said.
