Riders clinch nationals berth

By Cody Stark
The Battalion
 Oklahoma State University gave the Texas A&M women's English equestrian team all it could handle this weekend at West Texas A&M as the Aggies fended off a late rally to clinch an automatic berth to nationals in Conyers, Ga., on May 3.

Oklahoma State won the first show on Friday by beating the Aggies, 28-23, but A&M went to bed with a comforting 213-199 region lead over Oklahoma State.

The Aggies tied Kansas State for first place in the first of two shows on Saturday. Oklahoma State finished third by only one point, and host West Texas A&M finished fourth.

The Aggies had a commanding 13-point advantage as they headed

Lanne just missed qualifying for last year's Olympics due to illness that slowed her during the Olympic trials.

The battle for second was much closer, however, as Nebraska made a late run on A&M by winning the 200-yard breaststroke and the 200-yard butterfly. The Aggies held off the Cornhuskers, and Nebraska finished third with 565 points.

"We thought second was as good as we could be, and we knew it was going to be tough, and it was," Bultman said. "Nebraska really came on strong this morning (Saturday) and made us earn it."

The Aggie divers secured the second-place finish for A&M by taking first, second, third and fourth in the platform diving competition.

Sophomore Katie Williams surprised many by winning the event over teammates Marie-Eve Marleau, Meghan Zack and Callie Petroff,

King then drew a charging foul against Gilbert, who fouled out, giving him a chance to make it a one-possession game.

He only hit one of two free throws however, and the Aggies never got closer as Missouri hit its free throws to close out the game.

"They went through adversity and they've been better because of it," said Missouri men's basketball coach Quin Snyder. "I think they're playing good defense, they're together, they're really athletic and they play hard. I thought
