A&M to host Zone 7 equestrian championships

By CODY STARK

Individual riders from the Texas A&M women's equestrian team look to advance to zone competition this weekend as the Aggies host the Zone 7 regional championships Saturday at N.W. Dick Freeman Arena.

Head coach Tana Rawson said she is confident the Aggies will do well and is enthusiastic about hosting the event.

"It is an easy show to host because we know exactly how many girls are riding," Rawson said. "There is usually not as many girls as the other shows. The girls are prepared. They have been working hard the last couple of weeks."

The English team has already qualified for nationals after edging out Oklahoma State University by two points in the last show of the season. English coach Meghan Nolan said all the pressure is gone because of the win.

"The nerves are way gone, and that is very, very nice," she said. "We have a lot more girls that we can take to nationals as individuals, which is our goal. Right now there are eight classes, so eight riders can go at least. We hope to take a lot more than that."

The top three riders from each class will compete at the Zone 7 championships at Colorado State University in Fort Collins on March 24.

The Aggies advanced 22 riders to the regional show.

The western classes consist of reining, alumni and alumni reining at the open, advanced, intermediate, and beginner levels.

In English style, the riders will participate in open fences and flat, intermediate fences and flat, novice fences and flat, and walk-trot.

Juniors Quincy Cahill and Germaine Dougherty will lead the charge in the western and English shows respectively. Cahill and Dougherty have already advanced to nationals in a special class reserved for the high-point riders from each region.

Cahill qualified for regionals in reining and open horsemanship. She dominated the reining class this year

The Texas A&M women's equestrian team will compete in the Zone 7 regional championships Saturday at the N.W. Dick Freeman Arena. The English show will be followed by the western show at 3 p.m. Saturday.

INVITATIONAL

this weekend.

"We expect to win every time," said freshmen pitcher Lindsay Wilhelmson. "We just go out and play our game."

The Aggies will start play at 3:30 p.m. against the Illinois State Redbirds. They will play their second game of the day at 5:45 p.m. with a showdown against the Iowa Hawkeyes.

The Aggies will take on Syracuse Saturday at 11 a.m. The Aggies will also tangle with Iowa on Saturday at 5:45 p.m.

The Aggies will face Illinois State on Sunday at noon.

The invitational will be capped off as the Aggies face Syracuse on Sunday at 2 p.m.

Aggies ready for archery tournament

By CODY STARK
The Battalion

The defending national champion Texas A&M women's archery team will host the South regional bracket of the Indoor National Tournament this weekend.

The National Archery Association will compile the results from eight other sites and declare team and individual winners. Last year, the Aggies edged out Columbia University to claim the national title.

Freshman Mary Zorn will look to win the compound national title. Zorn finished third in the World Archery Festival in Las Vegas after facing collegiate and professional athletes. Zorn said she is confident about her performance this weekend.

"I'm really not too worried about playing the waiting game," Zorn said. "The competition here will be pretty decent, and if I shoot the way I know I can, then I'll know if I have a chance or not."

Zorn will try to break the world record this weekend. The two-round score of 590 is the current world record in the compound class. Zorn has been shooting record-caliber scores in practice, and she thinks the record will fall soon.

"I'm all over it," Zorn said. "It is mine, or at least that is what I'm telling myself. My goals this weekend are to only win, that would be nice, but to set the world record. Well, not to only set it, but to have it for a while."

"My goals this weekend are to only win, that would be nice, to set the world record."

Milchanowski are the only returning members of the recurve championship team. Chudy is also the defending individual recurve national champion. She beat State's Jessica Carlson, the fifth-ranked recurve archer in the country, by 19 points.

Events begin at 6 p.m. Friday, 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Saturday, and 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. Sunday. The tournament will be held at the Student Recreation Center and admission is free.
