Twins select No. 1 Mauer in baseball draft

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe Mauer, a slugging high school catcher with a strong arm, was taken by the Minnesota Twins with the No. 1 pick in Tuesday's baseball draft.

Mauer, a three-sport star from Cretin-Derham Hall in St. Paul, Minn., is the first catcher drafted with the top pick since Milwaukee took B.J. Surhoff in 1985.

The 6-foot-4, 205-pound Mauer was a standout in baseball, basketball and football, and intends to concentrate on playing baseball despite a scholarship to play quarterback at Florida State.

Mauer joined Danny Goodwin (Chicago White Sox, 1971) and David Clyde (Texas, 1973) as the only players to be chosen by their hometown teams with the No. 1 pick.

The Chicago Cubs selected Mark Prior, the Southern California right-hander considered by some to be the best college pitcher ever, with the second pick.

Prior, 14-1 with a 1.50 ERA, had a school and Pac-10 conference-record 189 strikeouts and just 17 walks in 131 2-3 innings for the College-World Series-bound Trojans. Some scouts believe he could be an effective major league pitcher right now.

The 6-foot-5, 220-pound Prior has a blazing fastball that reaches the mid-to-high-90s, an excellent breaking ball and a solid curve. He was drafted by the New York Yankees with the 43rd pick in 1998, but opted to go to Vanderbilt. He transferred to USC after his freshman year and quickly established himself as one college baseball's most dominant pitchers.

Dewon Brazelton, a hard-throwing right-hander from Middle Tennessee State, was taken by Tampa Bay with the third overall pick.

Brazelton went from being an unknown pitcher to one of the best in college after an outstanding summer with Team USA, going 6-0 with a team record-ERA of 0.65.

Philadelphia chose right-hander Gavin Floyd with the fourth pick. Floyd, from Mt. St. Joseph High School in Severna Park, Md., has a fastball that touches the mid-'90s and sometimes gets up to 97 mph. Floyd also has an impressive, knee-buckling curve, among the best in the draft, and excellent command.

Mark Teixeira, the sweet-swinging Georgia Tech third baseman considered to be one of college baseball's greatest switch-hitters, was taken by Texas with the fifth pick.

Teixeira was sidelined for 10 weeks with a broken right ankle, but picked up where he left off as soon as he returned to the lineup last month.

The 6-foot-3, 225-pound Teixeira has hit for power and average everywhere he has swung a bat, including for Team USA last summer and in the Cape Cod League in past seasons. He is a good overall athlete who developed into a fine defensive third baseman.

The Montreal Expos took UCLA right-hander Josh Karp with the sixth pick. After an outstanding performance for Team USA last summer, Karp struggled with a nagging groin pull and his command. But his size and repertoire — a fastball that hits the mid-'90s, good curve and solid changeup — have many believing he has the potential to become a dominant pro pitcher.

Baltimore went for Chris Smith, a left-hander from Cumberland College in Tennessee, who helped lead Florida State to the College World Series last season as an outfielder.

He wanted to hone his pitching skills, but Seminoles coach Mike Martin preferred Smith remain a position player. Smith had to settle on transferring to an NAIA school when Martin would not grant a release. He became one of the top left-handers in the country, and again showed his natural ability as a hitter (.414, 17, 67).

John VanBenschoten, a right-hander and first baseman from Kent State went to Pittsburgh with the eighth pick. He led the country with a school and Mid-America Conference-record 31 home runs. The conference player of the year also set school and conference records in hits (99), RBIs (84), walks (55) and total bases (221), and led conference with eight saves.

Colt Griffin, a right-hander from Marshall High School in Texas, was taken with the ninth pick by Kansas City. He burst onto the scene when he threw a 100-mph pitch in front of dozens of scouts two months ago. Griffin was a first baseman and outfielder until this season, during which he struck out 110 in 59 innings.

Houston selected Tennessee infielder Chris Burke, the Southeastern Conference player of the year, with the 10th pick. He broke Todd Helton's school records for career hits, runs scored and doubles, and became the school's career leader in singles and triples. Burke is regarded as an ideal leadoff man.

Rice right-hander Kenny Baugh was drafted by Detroit with the 11th pick. Baugh, drafted by Oakland in the fifth round last year, returned for his senior season and is just one of 10 Division I pitchers with at least a career victories (41) and 400 career innings pitched (460).

Next, Milwaukee took right-hander Mike Jones from Thunderbird High School in Arizona. He is regarded as an outstanding athlete who has excellent mechanics, a smooth arm motion and a fastball that hit the mid-'90s.

Casey Kotchman, the son of Anaheim minor league manager and scout Tom Kotchman, was selected by the Angels with the 13th pick. The smooth-hitting left-hander is considered one of the best pure high school hitters in recent years and also has excellent defensive ability at first base.

Tulane third baseman Jake Gautreau was taken by San Diego with the 14th pick. Gautreau established himself as one of college baseball's top all-around hitters and led Division I with 91 RBIs.

Auburn junior outfielder Gabe Gross went to Toronto with the 15th pick. He concentrated solely on baseball after starting six games at quarterback for the Tigers as a freshman. Gross is a good all-around athlete who complements his natural power with good speed and the offense and getting the basketball to where you want it to be Watkins said.

Watkins added that injured players Tomas Ressa and Andy Sloan seem to be recovering and he is cautiously optimistic that they will return full strength for next season. He believes that their return as well as the new additions, could be a big step in the improvement of the program.

"Getting those guys back and adding Daryl Mason and the guys we've signed, we feel pretty good going into the season that we have a chance to have what we would call a breakout season," Watkins said. "We're excited about what the potential of this team can be. With chemistry and a little luck I wouldn't be surprised if this team makes a big jump in the Big 12 from the bottom to at least the middle and to the upper echelon."
