declined to comment on any action taken by the University against the students, citing it is University policy not to make public any disciplinary action against students. However, Lighty said the matter was immediately turned over to Student Conflict Resolution Services.

According to the Texas A&M student rules, the students may face permanent expulsion.

Northside area coordinator Mike Krenz said there did not appear to be any provocation for the incident and he was unaware of any substantial dorm rivalry between Moore and Crocker. The three students could not be reached for comment.

Krenz said Crocker Hall is commonly investigated for "pranks," but those responsible are seldom found.

Murray said two previous incidents similar to the spill have been recorded at Moore. One in the fall also involved road kill and an incident early in the spring semester involved "fish and chicken guts spread all over the place." No one has been found responsible for either.

"I am glad to see that those responsible have been found in this case," he said. "Students need to know that this type of behavior isn't tolerated here."

BOWEN

Dr. Bowen rose time and time again to successfully meet every challenge thrown his way, whether it be charting a new University vision for the 21st century, attracting the George Bush Presidential Library or comforting grieving parents and students following the Bonfire collapse."

As Bowen talked about his future plans, he said, "I look forward to returning to the classroom. I've always enjoyed teaching."

Nye said he wishes Bowen well on his resignation. "I view this as a happy day rather than a sad day," Nye said. "[Bowen] has gone through challenging years as president and has always done exceedingly well. He now has a chance to pursue some of his other goals."

A new president will begin duties as of June 30, 2001.

Regent R. H. "Stevens" Jr. said Chancellor Howard Graves will soon construct a search committee faculty and other individuals representative of the president's constituency. The committee will perform an open, nationwide search for candidates to choose three or four of the most viable candidates for selection by the board of regents.
