See turtles

STUART VILLANUEVA/The Battalion

Visitors to the Texas State Aquarium in Corpus Christi pass by as Daisy, a young ridley sea turtle glides through the water Friday. Daisy and other sea turtles are part of a rehabilitation program aimed at nursing them back to health after traumatic injuries. If there is no permanent disability they are released into the wild.

Boy's arm reattached after shark attack

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — An 8-year-old boy whose arm was reattached after a shark attack has made good progress, but may need more than a year to regain use of the limb, doctors said Sunday.

"The doctors were pleased, he had a good 24 hours," said Pam Bilbrey, spokeswoman for Baptist Hospital Pensacola. "They were pretty ecstatic when they left this morning, about how well he's doing right now."

The boy "shows no sign of failure of blood supply to the arm; he shows no sign of infection," the hospital said in a news release.

Jesse Arbogast of Ocean Springs, Miss., was attacked Friday evening while swimming at Gulf Islands National Seashore near Fort Pickens in the Florida Panhandle.

His uncle wrestled the 7-foot-long bull shark to shore.

"He's a big guy. He got hold of it and tossed it ashore," said District Ranger Supervisor John Bandurski.

Ranger Jared Klein then shot the shark four times with a 9mm pistol, and pried its jaw open with a police baton. Volunteer firefighter Tony Thomas used a clamp to pull the boy's severed arm of the shark's gullet.

The boy had no pulse and no blood pressure when he was airlifted to the hospital about 30 minutes after the attack, said Dr. Jack Tyson. The trauma surgeon said it was too early to tell if Jesse may have suffered brain damage.

Ian Rogers, the plastic surgeon who helped reattach the arm, said he is hopeful the boy could regain near normal use of his arm in 12 to 18 months, with extensive therapy.

Teen being held in death of his mother

CHANNING, Texas (AP) — A Clovis teen wanted in the beating death of his adopted mother was caught after being chased by officers and shooting fireworks at them from a van he allegedly stole from her, authorities said.

"You could see the fuse lighted when it went out the window. You could see all these different colors. That was a new one for me," said Hartley County Chief Deputy Cody Weavers.

Arnell VanDuyne, 16, also known as Arnell Young, was being held Saturday in a juvenile detention center in Amarillo, Texas. Since he is a juvenile, no bond has been set, Clovis police said in a news release.

Officials had been seeking the teen on an open charge of murder in the death of Norma Lee

Young, 41, who had been caring for eight young children in her Clovis home.

Young's 15-year-old son, Jeremiah Cabrera, found her bleeding in her bedroom Thursday afternoon when he returned from work.

He called 911 and administered CPR to his mother until paramedics arrived, police said. She died at the scene.

The first officer to arrive at the house found Young lying on the floor, her clothes cut or torn off and her hands tied behind her back with plastic zip ties.

An arrest warrant was issued Friday for VanDuyne, who was identified by two 6-year-old boys in the house as having committed the slaying.

About 11:30 p.m. that night, the Hartley County Sheriff's Department received a call regarding a possible drunk driver in the Channing area, Weavers said. A check revealed the van was the one believed to be occupied by VanDuyne.

The teen attempted to speed away from officers, traveling as fast as 90 mph and dropping lighted fireworks out the window, Weavers said. The chase lasted 10 to 15 miles before the van's right rear tire blew.

He was taken into custody without further incident.

"He obeyed all commands, was cooperative and didn't have anything to say," Weavers said.

Clovis Police Lt. Dan Blair said Saturday police believe the van had belonged to Young.

Blair said the teen likely would not be returned to Clovis until sometime next week.

EXPRESS

"You have to revert to the college mode and try to block it out, but you still have butterflies," he said.

Kyle Kessel, a former point guard on the A&M basketball team, is in his second season with the Express. A native of Illinois, Kessel has taken to the Lone Star State.

"It's nice here. When I first came to Texas, I wasn't sure that I was going to like it, but I really do. Somehow, I keep winding up here."

Kessel said he enjoyed his time in College Station but notes the difference between playing for Tony Barone's struggling basketball teams and the defending Texas League Champions.

"It's more fun to be at the park," he said. "The morale's better, and it helps you personally when you're struggling because you know the team's still going to have a chance."

Kessel spent the start of the season at AAA New Orleans, but has few regrets about returning to Round Rock.

"It's nice up there, they have a nice park, but the don't draw (crowds) as well. It's not as special as this," he said.

Kessel said there is one thing that differentiates baseball fans in Texas from fans elsewhere.

"The knowledge of the fans here is amazing," he said. "They're so into the game. Even when the other team makes a great play, they'll get up and clap. They don't do that in other places."

For Reid Ryan, a personal dream comes true every time the Express take the field.

"It was my idea to bring a team here, and I got the whole thing started," he said. "Not too many people get not only to be in baseball, but make a living."

The Express won the Texas League championship and set the AA attendance record in their first season, an obvious source of pride for the team's president.

"You can't expect or predict something like this. We just got lucky," Ryan says.

"A lot of players say that if they can't be in the majors, they might as well be here."

EVANS

Evans was recognized by the A&M Foundation Board of Trustees in 1998 with the institution of the Sterling C. Evans medal for outstanding contributions to Texas A&M philanthropic efforts.

"This school has meant more to me than any other place I know, and it needs to play that same role for generations to come," Evans said at the ceremony. "That's why I keep giving and keep encouraging other people to give."

Funeral service are scheduled for 10 a.m. Tuesday, July 10, at the first Baptist Church in Castroville, near San Antonio.

Levin death ruled suicide

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Attorney Barry Levin, who handled Erik Menendez's defense and more recently represented actor Robert Downey Jr., died of a self-inflicted wound to the head, an autopsy showed Sunday.

Levin, 54, reportedly found slumped over the wheel of his car Saturday noon. The former paratrooper was parked at Erans cemetery.

The autopsy confirmed preliminary findings that Levin committed suicide, Los Angeles County Coroner's Corral said.

Levin was a co-counsel for Menendez, who was sentenced to life without parole in 1992 with brother Lyle for the murders of their parents. Levin represented Blake, star of the "Baretta" TV series.

Levin's wife, Deborah, said she was also the lead attorney in a case stemming from alleged corruption in the city's police department.

Levin's brother-in-law, law partner, Ron Dorfman, said Levin suffered from Crohn's disease, an inherited inflammatory bowel disease that can lead to deficiencies in blood and bone marrow. He was in constant pain.

Levin's wife, Deborah, said she found him Saturday morning in his office so he could tie up loose ends at work, she said. After returning home, Levin left the house Sunday and called police. His car was found about 2 p.m. at Los Angeles National Cemetery.

FBI agent Richard G. said Saturday that investigators discovered "some evidence note." On Sunday, a spokesman Matthew McLaughlin declined to elaborate. The agency is investigating whether the death occurred on his property.

HOTELS

them to try the Navasota Western, Cedar Creek Super 8."

For out-of-town seasoners, et holders who do not travel far distances, they opt to wait and try to get a room that someone is cancelling during the hotels' cancellation policy.

The Hilton requires guests cancel two weeks prior to ball games and the Ramada has a 72-hour cancellation policy so that those rooms given to last-minute ticket holders looking for a room.

Othold said the best would be to build another in College Station.

"I hope they will build a hotel here," Othold said. "I don't know if they will, but need one and it needs to be at least 500 people."

Navasota Super 8 manager Charles Schwede said the peak weekends, such as A&M home football weekends, all hotels and within a 50-mile radius aren't more hotels or motels in the area," Schwede said.

"The problem is the too cyclical. You only have football game weekends maybe another six to weeks of the year that full. It costs, literally, $1 million to build a motel and a quarter of your weeks full, it's hard to keep your open," he said.
