Former president moves into new Harlem office

NEW YORK (AP) — Clean, bright and contemporary, the Harlem office Bill Clinton moves into on Monday is furnished with off-the-shelf pieces from design stores.

There is no oval in this office, no classical furniture and no mahogany, said Navid Maqami, director of the New York office of Greenberg Farrow Architecture.

"We were delighted to find out that he liked a cleaner, more contemporary look," said Maqami, whose office came up with an understated design in beiges and earth tones with accents of cherry veneer.

Clinton's staff moved into the office last week. Thousands of Harlem residents and civic leaders were expected to welcome him to the neighborhood with a block party Monday.

The 8,300-square-foot office, leased at a taxpayer cost of about $261,450 per year, is on the top floor of a newly renovated 14-story building. The lease comes to about $354,000 when electricity is added and tenant improvements are made.

The former president chose the space after a barrage of criticism over his first choice — penthouse suite in midtown Manhattan. The office would have cost taxpayers about $800,000 per year.

The Harlem office capitalizes on its stunning views of Central Park, the Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine and even the Empire State Building — some 4 1/2 miles away.

"President Clinton wanted it to be very open and light, a place where he could bring all of his books — and he's got over 7,000 volumes in his library," said Julia Payne, his spokesperson.

It was important to Clinton that the office be casual enough that visitors feel comfortable. "When people meet the president they are overwhelmed; the intention is to put people at ease," Maqami said.

Clinton's 22-by-42-foot private office includes a pantry and a private bathroom with a shower.

"We're excited to finally be putting last season behind and are ready to begin a routine for this year," Stoops said.

When asked about Heupel's departure, Stoops said, "Two years ago, no one was bragging about Josh Heupel. He really only had 15 days to learn the offense." The two quarterbacks competing for the quarterback job are Nate Hybl and Jason White. Stoops expressed confidence in both saying, "either one of them can do the job."

The Nebraska Cornhuskers are another popular pick to make a run at a national title. With the return of senior quarterback Eric Crouch and a large offensive line, Nebraska could contend for their first championship since 1997.

Waiting to derail Nebraska is the Kansas State Wildcats. Ranked as high as sixth in the country, Bill Snyder's team is a threat in the Big 12 North. Early season games against USC and Oklahoma could be difficult tests for the Wildcats, but Snyder welcomed the challenge.

"I think the positive thing is you want to be in the best football conference. All of us feel a great sense of pride of being in the conference. The negative is you are on this because everyone is so good," Snyder said.

Colorado head coach Gary Barnett talked about last year's rough start, saying it was "a cult for the team to rebound after that (0-4 start)."

This year, Barnett is expecting quarterback Craig Ocheltree to improve after he set a school record for freshman in passing yards (1,778) and total offense (1,884).

The addition of Bob Knight as Texas Tech's basketball coach has taken a lot of attention away from coach Mike Leach and the football program. However, Leach's quarterback Kliff Kingsbury feel their team is ready to step into the league's elite. A lot of pressure is being placed on Kingsbury, but the bulked-up Red Raider quarterback seemed unphased.

"Last year we kind of got started and kind of learned our way and got the system rolling, there's definitely room for improvement. I see a big year for our offense this year."

With games against New Mexico, The University of Texas-El Paso and North Texas to begin the season, the Raiders should have a quick start before playing Texas, Texas A&M, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Kansas State.

ARMSTRONG

"This year I've decided to try what I can," he says of his linguistic efforts. "I've decided to be more accessible to the people and the media."

Armstrong is, indeed, treated more respectfully by the French media now than during his first Tour victory. There, despite his moving story, some French headlines used double meanings to show disbelief that he could ride so well without the help of banned drugs.

"Hallucinating," said one. This year, Armstrong received mostly favorable press. When he bluffed Ullrich in his first mountain stage, falsely making for the cameras to make it appear he was tired, he was praised for his tactics rather than rebuked.

French TV commentators noted that Armstrong made some classy gestures during last year's race, including waiting Ullrich when the German fell his bike during a mountain stage.

"Armstrong was magnificent," said 25-year-old Arnaud Blais of Paris after Sunday's finale. "It would have been for someone French to win, they aren't strong enough."
