Indonesian landslide kills at least 64

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Torrential rains triggered massive landslides, burying houses and killing at least 64 people on a remote Indonesian island, government officials said Wednesday.

The landslides struck Tuesday after days of heavy rain on the island about 60 miles off the northwest coast of Sumatra, said Abdurrahman Nasution, a local government official.

Nasution said that rescue workers were on their way to Sambulu village in the island's mountainous interior, where at least 62 people were dead.

Police officer Lt. Meliala said up to 800 people were missing but could be sheltered on high ground from flood waters.

Meliala said there were more landslides in the area, near the village of Telukdalam, killing two people. The officials said more than 100 houses were destroyed and hundreds of other homes were damaged in Sambulu. Villagers were searching through the rubble for survivors.

Hendrik Gulo, another government official in Nias town, Gunung Sitoli, said bodies had been recovered.

He said two rivers had overflowed their banks and flooded the surrounding countryside. Sambulu village was still under water on Wednesday.

Wednesday's rain had stopped raining.

"With so much flooding, we are worried some bodies will be swept out to sea," he said. Three earthquakes — two of magnitude 5.3 and 5.4 — were recorded in Nias island on Tuesday. It was not clear whether the blizzards had contributed to the disaster.

Gay marriages become legal in Germany

BERLIN (AP) — German gays exchanged vows at ceremonies Wednesday, gaining rights previously reserved for married couples as a new law went into effect despite fierce opposition from some conservatives.

Dozens of ceremonies across the country marked a victory in a decade-old fight by gay rights groups to bring Germany in line with other European countries that have passed similar legislation. Berlin, Germany's unofficial gay capital, vows were exchanged by two members of the Greens party, which campaigned hard for legislation.

"We exchanged rings symbolically five years ago, but this is a real thing," said Gudrun Pannier, 36, beaming in a dark suit at the wood-paneled registry office in Berlin's Schoeneberg district.

"We are all equal, so we should be treated equally," said her partner, Angelika Baldow, also 36. The couple exchanged rings at a brief ceremony in front of about 30 guests.

The law allows gay couples to register their unions at government offices and requires a court decision for divorce. Same-sex couples also will receive inheritance and health insurance rights when married spouses.

The law was passed by the lower house of parliament last year, but the upper house — where Chancellor Gerhard Schröder's coalition of the Social Democrats and Greens lacks a majority — voted to withhold some tax privileges granted to married couples.

Berlin's mayor sent congratulations to couples registered Wednesday.

"You have taken the first step into new territory," wrote Wowerit, who became Germany's most prominent openly gay politician when he took power in June.

Couples in three states — Bavaria, Mecklenburg-Vorpommern and Hesse — will have to wait before they can legally seal their partnerships, as authorities there have delayed implementing the new law.

Germany's highest court is considering an application to conservative-led Bavaria to put the new law into effect immediately, but was not expected to rule in time. Gay groups planned a protest Wednesday in Munich, the state capital.

Bavaria, along with the eastern state of Saxony, unsuccessfully sought an injunction in Federal Constitutional Court to prevent the law from taking effect Aug. 1, arguing that the law violates constitutional provisions protecting marriage and family.

Countries that have granted legal status to same-sex couples include France, Sweden, Denmark, Norway and Iceland. The Netherlands legalized same-sex marriages in April.

News in Brief

Woman attacked by hippopotamus

KIEV, Ukraine (AP) — A hippopotamus reportedly attacked an 18-year-old woman after she entered its cage and plunged into its pool at a zoo in the eastern Ukrainian city of Kharkiv.

The woman, identified only as Yekaterina, ignored warning signs and dove into the pool with a female hippopotamus and its 6-year-old offspring, local newspapers reported Wednesday.

The hippo picked up the woman with its mouth and shook her by the waist before tossing her into the air, newspapers said. Three zoo visitors then rescued the woman, a daily newspaper Fakty said.

The woman was hospitalized in serious condition with broken bones and concussion.
