horizontally," he said. "It's a sober assessment although tragedy will not settle in the next few years."

Sprecher, who addressed foreign policy implications, said that Tuesday's changed foreign policy than the fall of the Berlin Wall.

Sprecher said that Americans' initial reaction and initiate random as bombing due to anger may provide short-term solace but more damaging in the long run.

Sprecher said although the United States has never used terrorism on this scale, usual policy is to find out and then bring them to the President Bush's claim these attacks are an act of very telling and shows a historic break in foreign policy, Sprecher said.

"This is a radical departure from the normal policy model," Sprecher said.

The Student Counseling Service has a 24-hour helpline staffed by students, and additional counseling is available in Henderson Hall. Olona said that the most important right now is personal care and for students to be there for one another.

"They don't need us to do things; they just need us to be there," she said.

WASHINGTON

Bush said, talking to reporters in the Oval Office.

Deputy Defense Secretary Paul Wolfowitz said the administration's retaliation would be "sustained and broad and effective" and that the United States "will use all our resources."

"It's not just simply a matter of capturing people and holding them accountable, but removing the sanctuaries, removing the support systems, ending states who sponsor terrorism," Wolfowitz said.

Senior administration officials said that Bush is planning a far-reaching anti-terrorist campaign that will likely last several years and target not only those who attacked Tuesday and their sponsors, but all terrorist activities.

Bush is determined not to bow to pressure for a quick strike that might undermine his efforts to build a major global campaign, an official said.

Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld, meanwhile, was considering asking for presidential authority to call to active duty members of the National Guard and Reserve, a defense official said.

The president comforted burned Pentagon workers and said he would go to New York on Friday. He also proclaimed Friday a national day of mourning and remembrance and said he would attend a memorial service in Washington with members of Congress.

Officials said they were speeding benefit checks of $150,000 to families of police, firefighters and other public-safety workers killed in the attacks. Stock markets are to resume Monday.

Cheney's spokeswoman, Julianna G. said the vice president had been spending at the presidential retreat in Maryland, "purely precautionary measure."

Officials said he had been spending there since Tuesday.

Meanwhile, searchers found the wreckage of one hijacked airliner in Pennsylvania, received a signal from the recorder on the plane that crashed at the Pentagon. Army General John Ashcroft said the FBI was looking on "thousands and thousands of leads" the investigation of the attacks.

Ashcroft said a total of 18 hijackers were the four planes — five on two and four on other two. All 18 were ticketed passengers, FBI Director Robert Mueller.
