Bands to perform at 125 celebration

BASH

Jalisco is a state in Mexico where the Mexican hat dance and a lot of salsa and merengue originated.

"The show will be really different. If you are afraid of knives, don't sit too close," said Leon with a laugh.

Taking the stage after Ballet Folklorico Celestial is country singer John Ashford Miles. Miles describes his music as from the heart and progressive country.

"Every song has a message and is definitely from the heart," Miles said.

Miles said he plans to open the show with a moment of silence for Bonfire victims and for those lost in New York, Pennsylvania and Washington, D.C.

Miles said he encourages students to come out and have a good time.

"Take the night off to have some fun," he said.

Grupo KaChe, a nine-member Latin-

Tropical Band, will follow Miles.

Rudy Rincon, a member of KaChe, said the group is looking forward to coming back to the A&M campus.

"We love you guys," he said. "We first performed here four years ago, and the response was incredible. We have had such an acceptance from everybody."

"The University and students pulled together to have this celebration; the University thought enough to fund it, and the students put a lot of work into it. It is a high-quality event."

Rincon said KaChe's goal is to get everybody to dance and to get away from their cares and worries. He said the show will be very light and energetic from the first beat until the end.

"It's such powerful music," Rincon said, "doesn't matter where you come from, you enjoy it."

Closing the show from 12:30 to 2:30 a.m. is the Austin-based rock band, Last Free Exit. J.T. Stewart, a guitar player and singer for the band, described the band's music as "groovin' rock 'n' roll and 'great barefoot music.'"

Stewart said the band, who's roots are in College Station, might have something planned in honor of A&M.

"There will be a little more maroon and a little more Aggie than usual at this show," he said.

Last Free Exit and the other bands are very thankful for the opportunity to play on the A&M campus and want to thank the organizers of the Birthday Bash, including them.

Stewart said there are no excuses not to attend the Birthday Bash.

"The University and students pulled together to have this celebration; the University thought enough to fund it and the students put a lot of work into it. It is a high-quality event," Stewart said. "If not for any other reason, [you] don't have school tomorrow, dammit come on out!"

Horoscopes

Aries (March 21-April 20)
Arians need a cause to fight for! They are born leaders and have the persistence necessary to take on challenges. Many Arians find that they are good athletes, doctors, soldiers, and leaders in politics and industry.

Taurus (April 21-May 20)
Taurians work best in environments that are slow to change and have little sense of urgency. They do well in professions such as architecture, banking, and medicine. They also make excellent managers in industries such as education and music.

Gemini (May 21-June 21)
Many Geminis have a strong sense of intuition and are analytically skilled. Communication through speech and writing is also a strong point. Many find happiness by becoming teachers, lawyers, or journalists. Since they enjoy travel, sales and public relations are also fields of interest.

Cancer (June 22-July 22)
The crab is well known for its emotional nature and its retentive memory. Cancers enjoy looking after others and may work in service industries ranging from medicine to catering. They are also excellent organizers with a strong sense of the economy and may excel in trading and real estate.

Leo (July 23-August 22)
Ambitious, courageous, independent...all describe the Leo personality. Leos need a profession with room to excel. In politics, Leos must have a powerful position or they will not be content. They are great at over-seeing and often lay groundwork for new projects. Management and entertainment also match their personality.

Virgo (August 23-September 22)
Virgos tend to be observant, patient, and conservative. These qualities might make them more comfortable as subordinates rather than leaders. Their potential resides in solving practical problems; accounting might be an option. They also make excellent welfare workers and flourish in ministering fields.

Libra (September 23-October 23)
Known for their elegance, charm, and good taste, Librans are energetic but dislike "dirty work." They succeed as lawyers, administrators, and civil servants. They also make good bankers, designers, and excel in PR management.

Scorpio (October 24-November 21)
Scorpions are outspoken and possess intense will-power. They possess the qualities necessary to succeed as a policeman or detective. Since they love a challenge, physics and psychology also attract them. Law and communications are also options.

Sagittarius (November 22-December 22)
Usually modest and sincere, Sagittarians are full of energy and adventure. They are natural teachers, philosophers, and public servants. Travel appeals to them, so they may find happiness in the armed forces or sales. They're also known for their interest in cars and aircraft.

Capricorn (December 23-January 20)
Serious, independent, hardworking, and ambitious...all describe Capricorn. They are attracted to careers dealing with finance and are strongly attracted to music. They are good managers, teachers, and engineers. They also find success in the field of entertainment.

Aquarius (January 21-February 18)
Aquarians are strong willed and seek the truth. They work best in group environments...as long as they are the leader! They may excel in photography and electronics, or anything technical. They also succeed in the arts and humanities, especially as writers, broadcasters, welfare workers, and teachers.

Pisces (February 19-March 20)
Pisceans are known for their friendly and compassionate nature. They tend to be better working by themselves or as a subordinate. Their sympathetic personality makes them excellent in the medical field as doctors, nurses, and vets. Their creative side can be useful in the arts and architecture.
