Fish

by R. DeLuna REVELLE

Reveille VII represents A&M, Aguirre said. She attends all athletic events, Yell Practice and student organization meetings, while visiting area schools and posing for photos. Aggie, Aguirre and Reveille logged more than 12,000 miles this summer traveling to Ag Mom clubs and A&M chapters across Texas. Aguirre calls herself her "main secretary."

"She loves to run up to people and greet them," Aguirre said. Reveille and her encourage the three Corps members, including Aguirre, who stand with at football games — fly on chartered planes to away games. Though she can be seen drinking bottled water at the football games, Aguirre says she eats regular dog food — not table scraps. Aguirre says that if the mascot ever jumps into his bed, he follows tradition, relinquishing the bed to the highest ranking corps member, and spends the night on the floor.

"It's tradition, and if you're following it, it just doesn't matter as much," Aguirre said. Reveille goes everywhere with the mascot corporal goes — to dates and grocery shopping. But Aguirre says taking the year-old with him is a challenge. Anything catches her attention from students and children wanting to pet her to motorcycles and golf carts whizzing by. "We're together all the time," he said. "It's that bond you get with a dog. Sooner or later, it's just not a dog anymore."
