Tech cancels game with IU

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—An Indiana official said Monday that the basketball game, which would have brought former coach Bob Knight back to Bloomington, Ind., was canceled because of new "circumstances." Spokesman Jeff Fanter said Texas Tech officials contacted Indiana earlier this month to discuss the game and that both schools agreed to cancel it.

"The circumstances at both schools have changed since the game was originally scheduled," Fanter said in a statement. "We were in agreement with Texas Tech and both schools agreed mutually to forgo the final year of the contract."

Indiana Athletic Director Michael McNeely was in meetings all day Monday and unavailable for comment, Fanter said. The game was originally scheduled as part of a three-game deal that was signed when Knight coached at Indiana.

Knight was fired Sept. 10, 2000, after violating the university's zero-tolerance policy and was hired by Texas Tech to replace the fired Jim Dickey.

The game would have brought Knight back to Bloomington for a showdown against Indiana, where he coached for 29 seasons and won a school record 661 games and three national championships.

Fanter said the game was not bought out and that there were no financial obligations for either school. The contract called for Texas Tech to visit Bloomington twice in exchange for Indiana visiting Lubbock, Texas, to help the Red Raiders open their new basketball arena in November 1999.

"Scheduling is a challenge that all athletic departments face, so we will always accommodate whenever possible," Fanter said. "It is our goal to schedule the most competitive men's basketball teams as possible."

Indiana could replace the game on the 2002-03 schedule, but Fanter did not say what the Hoosiers intended to do.

Texas Tech has had discussions about another contest in Indiana, against Purdue, but Boilermakers coach Gene Keady has said that would not happen next year.

"There's no game with Texas Tech. Period," Keady said last month. "Pat Knight called one of my assistants this spring and asked if we might be interested in playing down the road. We've heard nothing from them since, nor have we followed up."

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Men's basketball begins practice

The Texas A&M men's basketball team began fall practices last weekend. The team practiced twice on both Saturday and Sunday.

The Aggies, who finished No. 11 in the Big 12 last season, return four starters and nine lettermen.

Junior guard Bernard King, and sophomore forward Nick Anderson will play for the Aggies again this season. King, a pre-season All-Big 12 selection by Basketball News, averaged 18.0 points and 4.8 assists per game last season.

Anderson was the only freshman in the Big 12 to start every game in 2000.

A&M will open its regular season on Nov. 19 against George Washington University at Reed Arena.

HELP

Wins by both Colorado and Nebraska would drastically ease the road for A&M, but the Aggies must find a way to win in big-game situations.

This Saturday's game against K-State will be a good indicator of the Aggies' big-game ability. Although the Wildcats are not the same caliber of team as they have been in the last few years, they are foaming at the mouth for a win after losing three straight conference games.

The Aggies showed they are a good team by taking one of the hottest teams in the nation down to the wire last Saturday, and on any given day could match up with any squad in the Big 12.

But a little help would go a long way.

all their third quarter woes the following drive after Murphy's touchdown but fumbled on a first-and-ten play from the Colorado 35-yard line after looking like they would march in for the game-winning score uncontested.

Junior quarterback Mark Faris and the Aggie offense looked sharp in the fourth quarter but came one big play short of a crucial Big 12 victory.

The A&M offense, that had found success on the ground prior to the Colorado game, was held to just 42 yards, a season low for the Aggies.

"We had trouble running the ball, just like every other team that has played Colorado," said A&M football head coach R.C. Slocum. "They stack the line and are very aggressive. Fortunately, we were able to pass the ball."
