Volunteers help bring Special Olympics to Bryan-College Station

By BETH MULDOON
THE BATTALION

For Debbie Reffner, a junior general studies major, being a Special Olympics volunteer brings the kind of rewards that arrive with the end of a race.

"When [the Special Olympics athletes] come across the finish line and give [the volunteer] a hug, it's the best part," Reffner said. "I was so touched that I cried at the spring games last semester."

This weekend, Bryan-College Station and Texas A&M will be transformed into an olympic village. The annual Special Olympics Fall Classic will host more than 1,200 athletes, 500 volunteer coaches and more than 1,500 community volunteers.

"Special Olympics is a chance for people with disabilities to showcase their talents," said Mary Kay Brown, a Special Olympics volunteer and a senior interdisciplinary studies major.

In addition to competition, events and activities such as the opening ceremonies, the victory dance and athlete village also will continue for the duration of the weekend to give the athletes and their families a chance to interact and relax between events.

"We are very excited to be hosting the Fall Classic this year," said Kim Fink, a Special Olympics volunteer and a senior education major at

A&M. "This is the first time Bryan-College Station has had the honor to host this large event for Special Olympics."

Each event will be held at a separate venue. Aquatics will be held at the A&M Natatorium, golf will be held at the A&M Golf Course and bocce will be played at the Southwood Park College Station. The triathlon will be at Bryan Aquatics Center and Bryan High School.

Of all the teams competing in the different venues, the only team that can claim a home advantage is the Aggie Bombers. The Bombers will bring 25 athletes, two coaches and two volunteers to the Fall Classic, all from Bryan College Station. Athletes from the team will compete in golf, bocce or both.

"We will be looking to play our best competing side-by-side with athletes from all over Texas," said Kent Herrman of Bryan and an athlete in the Fall Classic.
