anthrax constitute different symptoms. The following guidelines also are from the Texas Department of Health:

- Initial symptoms of inhalation anthrax infection may resemble a common cold. After several days, the symptoms may progress to severe breathing problems and shock.
- The intestinal form is characterized by an acute inflammation of the intestinal tract. Initial signs of nausea, loss of appetite, vomiting and fever are followed by abdominal pain, vomiting of blood and severe diarrhea.
- The cutaneous form of the disease begins with itching at the site of the exposure, followed by the formation of a round, pimple-like sore. This sore will then form a blister which, after two to six days will become a hard, black scab.

proposal, it is being collected again because a more efficient and better way of conducting the research was established.

"We looked at 24-hour spots and noticed how they were being underutilized, and this was occurring during the evening hours when students need to be as close to campus as possible," Pearson said. "We can't force the change; we can only give our recommendation. Hopefully, Faculty Senate and PTTS will be in agreement with us."

Pearson said that although more parking is being added, it is located far from campus and is not helpful to students in the evenings because it is unsafe and time inefficient.

Senators also discussed the possibility of extending out-bound dining services to off campus restaurants.

"Senate has progressive ideas that obviously we need to investigate," Pearson said. "We are just in the preliminary stages of expanding the out-bound services."

Pearson said that restaurants, such as McDonald's, Wings N' More, Subway, Whataburger and Jack in the Box will be considered as possibilities for expanding the meal plan options.

Kevin Capps, external affairs chair and a sophomore history major, said that if this is something students want, then they should show their support by suggesting restaurants that they would like to include in the Outbound option.

"Students like to eat off campus," Capps said. "We want to help them in a way that can benefit everyone. Businesses will benefit by increasing patronage, benefit the University by making additional revenue on meal plans and the students by giving them more options."

Student Body President Schuyler Houser, in her report to the senators, encouraged them to talk to the administrators and get student input about the excellence fee that is being proposed by A&M President Dr. Ray M. Bowen. The excellence fee will charge new students coming into A&M a $30-per-credit-hour tuition fee to help cover the $6.2 million budget deficit that occurred this year.

"I can't express to you how important the excellence fee is, this is a really big deal for the University," Houser said. Other official business at the meeting included an Aggie Alcohol Awareness Week Resolution and a resolution of Condolences to the University of Wyoming, where on Sunday, Sept. 18, 2001 eight student athletes were killed in a car accident.

his innocence during the 30-minute speech in federal court. The government branded him a traitor and a liar, saying he had money for bin Laden's al-Qaida organization as he led the life of a family man in Arlington, Texas.

El-Hage "claims to be a citizen, but he's not an American," prosecutor Patrick Fitzgerald said. "He betrayed his country, he betrayed his religion, he betrayed humanity."

Odeh, whose lawyer acknowledged that he "was a soldier in the military wing of al-Qaida," showed no remorse at sentencing, and asserted that terrorism was the result of U.S. policies in the Middle East.

only right to give some back," said Biggerstaff, a junior biology major. For first time participant, Sharissa Johns, a junior conservation science major, said having Replant in the spring fits better in her schedule.

"I was unable to participate last year because of scheduling conflicts," Johns said. "Replant is a good outreach project for our community. It's a good tradition, and I'm excited about it."

Rosen said the Replant committee has not yet decided if they are going to host a spring Replant.

"It depends on how well we do this Saturday," she said.

CHILCOAT

His experience in Higher Education made him a prominent candidate for dean of the Bush School. Chilcoat said he was very excited to take the position.

"One of the reasons I came to A&M was the compelling vision of the Bush School and A&M's Vision 2020," Chilcoat said.

Chilcoat hopes to contribute to Vision 2020 by linking the Bush School's vision to Vision 2020.

"After much discussion with students, faculty and administrators, it's clear we wanted to build a great school and begin to see a vision with a strategic plan to implement that vision," Chilcoat said. "My leadership and guiding theme is 'Building the Bush School for the future.'"

Chilcoat said he wants to contribute by making the Bush School a premier institute of government similar to other top national programs at Harvard and Princeton.

"We have a five year history and three graduated classes of 20 students each, with research in sciences and technology, public policy, presidential studies, and governance," Chilcoat said. "This summer we also implemented permanent core faculty and in the future we want to introduce
