Injuries continue to hurt Aggs

Carriger finds himself in starting role after injuries

By BRIAN RUFF
THE BATTALION

When freshman defensive lineman Thomas Carriger signed to play football with the Texas A&M football team, he was expected to redshirt his first year at A&M.

Now, with injuries cutting the Aggies' depth chart paper thin, Carriger has been thrust into the starting tight end spot, a far cry from what he was brought here to do.

"People just kept getting hurt," Carriger said. "It is hard for them, but I am going to have to step up and try to do what they were going to do."

When fall workouts began, the Aggies came into the season with a stacked chart at tight end, with senior Lonnie Madison and junior Michael de la Torre returning in 2001.

"Going into the year, we looked at what we had and thought we were in pretty good shape," said A&M football head coach R.C. Slocum. "We thought two of our better players on offense would be Lonnie Madison and Michael de la Torre."

Offensive coordinator Dino Babers hoped to run double tight-end formations, utilizing both of the returnees' talents on the field at the same time. But with both being hampered by injuries, the A&M coaching staff has been hard at work looking for solutions.

"When you go to two tight ends and you put out two wide [receivers], it gives you a run-pass threat out of that situation," Slocum said. "Now, we can't do all that. We get very limited in the kind of plays we can run."

When Madison blew out his knee the first day of fall practice, the Aggie offense suffered, but still had de la Torre, and sophomore Fred Spiller to fill in the hole.

More salt was poured on the wound later, when back problems forced Spiller to undergo surgery. Redshirt freshman Joey Perot moved into the second string spot, but shoulder problems continued to plague Perot and he was forced to sit out the 2001 season after shoulder surgery.

That is where Carriger would come in.

The Class AA Skidmore High School product was asked to step in and began working with the tight ends early in the season. After Perot's injury, the two-tight-end formation was just a memory.

Before the Kansas State matchup, the Aggies were dealt another fatal blow, as de la Torre was diagnosed with a herniated disk in his back, ending his A&M football career. De la Torre had been hampered with back problems during his first two seasons with the Aggies.

"Last week was a total shock," said A&M tight ends coach Tam Hollingshead. "Michael de la Torre probably had the best workouts of the year."

Carriger started against the Wildcats and has walk-on Haven Massey in the second-string spot. Massey weighs in at just 218 pounds and stands 6-feet, 2-inches tall, slightly undersized for a blocking tight end.

"It is pretty amazing that that could happen at one position," said junior quarterback Mark Farris. "Playing in this conference, guys are going to get hurt. It is up to other guys to step up and take their place. To be a defensive lineman at a AA high school, and to be able to play at tight end and play a lot is pretty impressive."

Tight end has not been the only position where the Aggies'
